FALL-SINCLAIR JURY PICKED

WOMEN IN BOX

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair took their places today before the bar of the District of Columbia Supreme Court and watched wearily the monotonous task of selecting a jury, which will try them on charges of criminal conspiracy in connection with the leasing to Sinclair of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve.

The former secretary of the interior, suffering from a cold, showed plainly his distaste of the dull routing of the court, and once dozed in his chair but Sinclair followed the proceedings closely as within two

Drug Store Robber Is Shot in Duel

AU REVOIR

Harry Bloche, 25, of Lincoln avenue, bid an all-too-hasty goodbye to J. J. Street, special officer, with whom he had just fought a gun battle in the Shadyside Pharmacy, 5213 Fifth avenue, last night, by firing a bullet through the door above as he fled. Bloche, police said, loaded his gun and fired the last shot after leaving the store.

AMONG THE CASUALTIES

When the smoke of battle cleared away Bloche and many pieces of glassware were found among the casualties. The would-be robber entered the store after midnight, held up the proprietor, and stepped behind the counter to the cash register. Street, whom the robber had not seen, opened fire, and the two exchanged a dozen shots. The effect of the volley on the glassware present can be discerned in the above picture.

12 INJURED IN $500,000 FIRE

STORES BURN IN PENN AVE.

Twelve firemen were injured, one perhaps fatally, as they fought a $500,000 blaze amid falling walls in the 900 block of Penn avenue late last night and early today.

Four general alarms and one special alarm brought out more than half the city's fire apparatus and men to battle the flames, which for more than four hours spread from building to building and threatened the entire wholesale district.

Deputy Chief Frank T. Loxterman was among the injured. He was overcome by smoke while directing the raising of a fire tower and was treated in Mercy Hospital.

The fire started from an undetermined cause on the fourth floor of a six-story brick building at 931 Penn avenue in the quarters of the William Pearlman Company, wholesale milliners. From there it spread rapidly to 929 Penn avenue, a six-story brick building occupied by the Ludwig Hammell Radio Supply Company and to 927 Penn avenue, another six-story brick occupied by the Hamburger Furniture Company.

It was while fighting the blaze in Wise Mr. Giannini.

All Depends on Men.
Mr. Ford's Rubber Trees.
23 Foolish Billions.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1927.)

THE Los Angeles Examiner says Mr. Giannini's Bank of Italy is now the world's largest financial institution, in capital and surplus, government institutions, only, excepted.

The Giannini bank, and its allied corporation, holder of gigantic assets, the Bancitaly, interest high finance. It would like to know how so big a concern could be built in California, far from Wall Street and the "money center." Here is a partial answer.

A. P. GIANNINI, starting just after the San Francisco fire, created his own precedents and traditions, being mercifully free from some of the old ones.

When the fire made timid financial gentlemen draw into their shells, Giannini made the loans they would not make. In 1907, when some bankers would not lend at any interest rate, Giannini advertised for good borrowers.

UNLIKE some bankers, he did not feel that the only time to lend is when money is not especially needed.

He had confidence in American properties and bought for his institution tens of thousands of shares of New York Central. Next to George F. Baker, Bancitaly is the largest holder of New York Central stock. He bought 200,000 shares of Standard Oil of California, which is like buying acreage in Sinbad's Valley of Diamonds, bought Standard Oil of New Jersey and large blocks of stock in the National City Bank of New York and other great concerns. And his company is the largest holder of United States government bonds.

ALL that was good judgment, but only the least part of Mr. Giannini's success. He understands the value of men and the importance of having them interested in their work.

When he bought up and absorbed scores of financial institutions, he kept the good men in them and showed them how to make more money, with the Bank of Italy back of them. More money for the bank, more for THEMSELVES.

AND let other "big men" observe this: HE GIVES THE EMPLOYES IN HIS INSTITUTION FORTY PER CENT OF ALL THE PROFITS. His sound belief is that with every man in the organization deeply interested stockholders will get more profit from sixty per cent of the earnings than they would from one hundred per cent under the old methods.

THE original Giannini stock has risen from one hundred to one thousand dollars a share. Mr. Giannini cautions the public against overspeculation in his stock, and you are hereby cautioned not to gamble in it, as many are doing.

THE whole problem in branch banking, according to Mr. Giannini, who has more than one hundred and sixty branches in California alone, is to find GOOD MEN.

And the problem, after you find them, is to keep them working. That is a problem with head men especially. The Giannini rule is that no man can remain president of the Bank of Italy for more than five years—then some other man gets the place.

After five years in the presidency, a man often devotes more thought to his own greatness than to the bank's needs.

WHAT is true of banking is true of everything. Encourage little men, interest them in the business and make sure that the big men are really working.

Standard Oil understands the problem, always promoting men

Special Cable Dispatch.

HORTA, Azores, Oct. 17. — We had our plane "American Girl" on the incline of the run-way used by Lindbergh, Chamberlain and Byrd at 1 o'clock Tuesday p. m., October 11.

Our take-off was delayed on account of fresh southeast winds which were predicted to change to southwest winds before 4 o'clock.

We waited until 4:30. With no change in wind direction or force at that time we decided our only chance to get started on our flight that day was to taxi the plane to the west end of the run-way for an eastward take-off.

JUST CLEAR WIRES

This we did, and at five minutes after five we gave the motor the gun to head down the runway with our plane loaded with 520 gallons of gasoline, 20 gallons of oil, emergency life suits and radio, as well as 14 pounds of food, lights and Very pistol ammunition.

We held the plane down, letting it gain all speed possible, and were not able to attempt to lift it off the ground until we were within a very few feet of the incline.

We left the ground and cleared the wires by a very few feet, but we had the load in the air, and had only one thought in mind—that of holding a true course until we landed in Paris.

PLANE TAIL HEAVY

We found that our plane was exceptionally heavy. We had set our compass course before leaving the ground, which took us due East for the first 1,200 miles. As our plane rose, our hearts rose in hilarous joy at being off at last on our great adventure after months of planning and weeks of waiting for good weather. During the first hour escorting planes were with us, but our minds were preoccupied with the task ahead of us. The air was very smooth, but we soon realized that the fresh southeast wind was cutting our speed down approximately 10 miles an hour.

We also found that it was impossible to gain more than 300 feet altitude, and we knew that would prob-

Miss Elder Heads for Paris

HORTA, Fayal Island, Azores, Oct. 17—Having tucked the lipstick into her vanity case, Ruth Elder was ready today to embark on the Portuguese mail boat Lima for Lisbon and Paris.

The fascinating aviatrix had no other luggage to pack.

While an admiring world still was retracing the path of the American Girl on its epoch flight, the air heroine, unspoiled by the adulation of the Azores, was frankly concerned

Injured at the Fire

The list of injured in the Penn avenue fire early today follow:

DEPUTY FIRE CHIEF FRANK T. LOXTERMAN, overcome by smoke, treated at Mercy Hospital, taken home.

CAPT. WILLIAM COSLETT, No. 12 Engine Company, compound fracture of the right leg, in Allegheny General Hospital.

CAPT. FRANK ECKLES, No. 3 Engine Company, probable fracture of the left ankle, at home.

HOSEMAN E. LANGBEIN, Engine Company No. 18; lacerations; treated at Allegheny General Hospital; taken home.

HOSEMAN JOHN MILLER, Engine Company No. 47; fractured ribs; at Allegheny General Hospital.

HOSEMAN JOSEPH HORNE, No. 1 Engine Company; lacerations, treated at Mercy Hospital, taken home.

HOSEMAN AUGUST ZITZMAN, No. 42 Engine Company; suffering from shock at Mercy Hospital.

MOTORCYCLE PATROLMAN FRANCIS FLANNERY, lacerations, treated at Mercy Hospital, taken home.

Dawn Sea Flight Fails

By International News Service.

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Me., Oct. 17.—Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson was forced to turn back on her non-stop flight to Copenhagen, Denmark, within 10 minutes after the take-off here today.

Her airplane, the Dawn, was unable to attain sufficient altitude as it swung out to sea.

BANDIT SHOT

Greeted with bullets when he attempted to holdup the Shadyside Pharmacy, 5213 Fifth avenue, last night, Harry Bloche, of Lincoln avenue, is in the Homeopathic Hospital. He fought a duel with J. J. Street, a special patrolman, who was in the store when the robbery attempt was staged.

This was the second drugstore holdup that was frustrated within two days. Dr. G. W. Alvin, of 544 Paulson avenue, chased two bandits with a chair when they attempted to rob the Alvin pharmacy in Walnut street, Saturday.

Bloche has bullet wounds in the left arm and shoulder.

The shooting occurred when the holdup man ordered George Bell, proprietor of the place, into the rear of the store at the point of a revolver.

Street, who was in the rear, drew his revolver and advanced on the holdup man, using a soda fountain counter as a shield. Several bullets chipped the fountain during the battle and others ploughed through showcases.

The holdup man, wounded, dashed from the store and escaped in a small

Bloche was arrested when he went to the office of Dr. Forbes S. Adams at 5601 Penn avenue for treatment. Not believing that his patient had been struck by a stray bullet as he had explained, Dr. Adams checked the story and then summoned police. When Bloche showed signs of leaving the doctor's office Dr. Adams explained to him that his wounds might result seriously if he moved. This quieted him until the patrol wagon arrived and removed him to the hospital, where a police guard is being maintained over him.

MAY PAROLE MEANS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The Federal Parole Board at Atlanta, Ga., has recommended an immediate parole for Gaston B. Means, who was sentenced from New York for his part in a liquor conspiracy, the Justice Department announced today.

Means is serving four years on two counts. His sentence was to expire in June, 1928.

Attorney General Sargent must approve the parole before it becomes effective.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 17.—Warden J. Snook, of the Federal penitentiary here, announced today that Earl Carroll would be given a second hearing before the parole board today.

The theatrical producer, who is serving a term of one year and a day for perjury in connection with his "famous bathtub party" case, appeared before the board last week, when he became eligible for parole.

Warden Snook explained the usual formality of forwarding Carroll's papers to Washington had been held up and that at a special meeting of the board Saturday it was decided to discuss Carroll's application further.

Invitation Is Not An Invitation --Ask Mike

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—When Michael Halalack, 39, was arrested at the home of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, he explained he wasn't attempting to break in, but was just making a social call.

Halalack declared Mrs. McCormick recently visited the penitentiary where he was serving a term, and gave him an "invitation to call."

Servants called police, who said they would place the man in the psychopathic ward for observation.

BUTCHER STRANGLES WOMAN HE MET HERE

DEATH ENDS SERIES ROMANCE

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Harry Gilmore, 27, a butcher, who has a horror for the gleaming blade of a knife, is in jail charged with the murder of Mrs. Helen Brandon, 26, formerly of Pittsburgh. He confessed, according to the police, that he strangled Mrs. Brandon Saturday when she brandished a carving knife in his face.

The tale goes back to the world series of 1925, when Gilmore opened a speakeasy near Forbes Field, Pittsburgh. There he met Mrs. Brandon and her son, Billy, 8. He said he fell in "love" with the woman, who had left her husband, Sam Young, a taxicab driver in Washington.

From then on their lives crossed at various times. Five weeks ago Gilmore took an apartment in New York for the woman and her son and a nearby room for himself. Neighbors thought they were brother and sister, and little Billy called Gilmore "uncle."

A breach developed between them three weeks ago, when Mrs. Brandon developed a new air of independence after taking a job as a waitress. A series of petty irritations—the woman's laziness; her failure to awaken Gilmore in time for work; her demand for breakfast in bed; her refusal to mend and iron his clothes, aroused Gilmore.

Saturday he had started to work, but turned back and entered a bitter argument with her. He struck her. She reached for one of the knives on the table. She had done that once before and Gilmore, shrinking, had begged her to drop it. On Saturday, however, he lunged at her and she fell under the force of the impact. He stepped over her and reached for her throat. A moment later he stepped from the room, locked the door and went to the butcher shop to carve meat.

He was arrested at 3 o'clock Sunday morning when he returned to his apartment to pack his things. He told his story almost immediately with apparent relief.

An autopsy showed the woman had died of strangulation and asphyxiation. Her mother, Mrs. Florence Hughes, of Washington, has been notified. Her son, Billy, is in the keeping of Mrs. Anna Decker, landlady who rented the rooms to Gilmore.

hours two-thirds of the prospective jurors were accepted tentatively, among them two women.

There was some surprise among spectators at the speed with which the jury box was being temporarily filled. Whether later challenges by government or defense will empty it was a question for the opposing attorneys to decide.

Notwithstanding the world-wide prominence given the famous case and the decision of the Supreme Court recently, which denounced the lease of the reserve to Sinclair, the jury panel called to hear the evidence contained many persons who declared they knew little about it.

As tentatively accepted, the first to qualify were Mrs. Annabella L. Bailey, formerly of Colorado; Miss Bernice Heaton, a telephone instructor; Charles T. Hennessey, a retired postal employe; N. T. Dent, a bank teller; Conrad J. Herzog, an automobile salesman; Armand Fonderville, a native of France; George Frazier, a clerk; Bradner Holmes, a department store floor manager, and William Bowser, bricklayer and professional ballplayer.

Show Tickets Deprive Frosh of Lunch

Some 70 freshmen in the medical school at the University of Pittsburgh will pore over their heavy textbooks tonight muttering to themselves that things were different in high school.

Meanwhile their upper classmen will be their guests at the Alvin Theater, thus carrying out a tradition which has left more than one frosh seeking sandwich money.

Annually the freshmen must pay the tax for all upper classmen to the same show, "Artists and Models." The powers have decreed that it shall be—and it is. And as a generous gesture the upper classmen take along the few faculty members who are interested in such things as artists and models.

But it costs each freshman something like $3.30, enough for a first payment on an old-fashioned raccoon coat.

from the ranks to high positions, and running an organization in which even the smaller men are violently interested.

HENRY FORD, it is said, will plant rubber trees on a three million acre concession in Brazil. His friend Firestone is planting rubber in Liberia. All modern methods, including airplane for surveying supervising will be used in the rubber planting.

BUT about the time these new rubber trees begin turning out tires, the General Motors or Standard Oil laboratory may supply a synthetic substitute for rubber that will make rubber trees useless.

NOT long ago tiny cochineal creatures were collected from leaves of plants for their brilliant crimson and small sea creatures were collected to provide purple back in ancient days. Now analine dyes have put an end to those slow processes. All that rubber possesses is the power to bounce back when you push it in, called "resiliency." Science will provide that resiliency without aid from rubber trees.

POWER companies worth twenty-three billion dollars don't want the government to harness the Colorado river. That might mean competition in the power business.

TWENTY-THREE BILLIONS is less than $230 per inhabitant of the United States—less than the price of a small automobile. "Twenty-three billions" sounds big, but 115,000,000 human beings, all interested in Colorado river development, possess power also. The Colorado will be developed, and power gentlemen will be glad when it happens. Learned bankers fought the Federal Reserve Law, dreading interference with pleasant profits. It has saved them from black panic half a dozen times.

Following this, the flames spread to the eighth floor of an eight-story building at 933 Penn avenue, occupied by the Pittsburgh Drygoods Company, and it was four hours later before the first recall was sounded.

Large crowds, attracted by the glare of the leaping flames, stood in the cold throughout the night, watching the progress of the battle from safety points more than a block away. Apparatus and hose covered more than two blocks on Penn avenue.

Hundreds of motorists watched the fire from Bigelow boulevard.

ably be our maximum altitude until we had consumed sufficient gasoline to lighten our load.

The sun went down at 5:35 and at 6 o'clock we passed directly over a passenger steamer puting out to sea.

The moon came up at 6:35 and it was a beautiful sight as we headed directly in its path.

We passed by Montauk Point and then by Nantucket, and left all land behind us at about 8 o'clock.

Between 8:30 and 10 o'clock we passed four westward bound steamers and signaled to them by flashing a light. At 9 o'clock George went to the rear to empty some of the five-gallon gas cans in the main tank in order that our plane would not be so tail heavy.

(Ruth Elder shared the controls of her plane, the American Girl, with Capt. George H. Haldeman on their dramatic flight. In the following paragraph Miss Elder discloses this for the first time.)

After he had poured 15 gallons into the main tank, I found it necessary to call George to the controls, realizing it was impossible for a 117-pound girl to hold such a heavy loaded plane for very long.

FUMES AFFECT HER

At 10 o'clock I went back to empty gas cans, and poured 25 gallons, became nauseated from gas fumes and from them on required less effort.

The ship was at this time considerably less tail-heavy, and its flying went forward.

After being refreshed by keeping the windows opened and feeling myself again, George broke the monotony by striking up the tune of the "prisoners' Song," and I tried to drown him out with "I'm On My Way to Gay Paree," to the tune of "Mandalay."

We were both in very high spirits with the marvelous moonlight, smooth-running motor and everything seemingly in our favor.

We had no thought for food or water, but were constantly watching our compasses and checking our drifts in hopes of maintaining a true course down the steamer lane.

During the next few hours we took turns at the controls, in order that neither of us should tire too quickly.

At 3 a. m. Wednesday George went in the rear and emptied remaining gas cans into the main tanks, throwing all empty cans overboard. This took him one hour, and at 4:15 he came forward and made a gasoline check which showed that our consumption had been 13½ gallons an hour for the first nine hours' flight.

We also determined at that time that we had lost approximately 20 gallons of gasoline which had gone out the filler caps of the inside wing tanks. We prevented this from occurring again by pumping into only one tank at a time, and shutting it off when full.

We were equipped with tables of sun rise and sun set but were unable to make an accurate check Wednesday morning as the sun rose over a very high bank of cumulous clouds. Immediately after sunrise we were able to tell that we were heading into a northeast wind, and made a five degree correction for drift. The sky was slightly overcast, but the ceiling of the clouds was very high, and we had been able during the night to attain an altitude of 3,500 feet, and were able to decrease our motor to 1,600 revolutions per minute. Running the first 12 hours we had no desire to eat, and knew that by not eating we would have less difficulty in staying awake.

IN HIGH SPIRITS

After making several speed and drift checks we determined that our speed had been cut down to approximately 90 miles an hour, and we were continuing to head into northeast winds. By referring to our last weather chart, which was supplied by Mr. Scarr and Maj. Kimball of the weather bureau, we believed that heading slightly to the right of the ship lane we would find more favoring winds.

With the glorious sunrise Wednesday morning we had occasion to be in high spirits, as 12 hours had been spent in the air and approximately one-third of our flight was behind us, the motor running beautifully and the weather chart showed that we had good weather and favorable winds for the next 12 hours over the ocean.

With the daylight Wednesday morning we made several checks of speed, drift, gas consumption, etc., in order that we might accurately know our position at all times, and just how long we would be able to remain in the air. We had the well wishes of so many of our friends ringing in our ears, and we were more anxious to make this flight successfully, as we knew it would be another feat accomplished for the furtherance of commercial aviation.

My wonderful dream had at last come true, and I was actually on my way on the most thrilling adventure of my life.

Ask $2,000 Minimum For M. E. Pastors

A minimum salary of $2,000, with parsonage, for each member of the Pittsburgh Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, was recommended by the Committee on Equalization of Salaries, at the closing day's session of the conference in McKeesport today. An additional $100 annually is to be allowed for each child in the pastor's family.

The matter, after adoption by the conference, was referred back to the committee for a plan to put it into effect and a report next year.

A revolutionary movement was started when the committee on memorials recommended—and the conference adopted—a resolution for the election of bishops for a term of eight years instead of for life. Bishops under this resolution would be eligible for re-election. The report was adopted 90 to 41.

Bishops would also be shorn of some power if a resolution adopted by the Pittsburgh conference is sustained by the general conference, that district superintendents be elected at the annual conferences, upon nomination by the bishop, who is to submit three names for each post for consideration.

The committee on memorials also recommended that, when the general conference elects bishops in the future, it designate whether they are to serve at home or abroad.

W. H. Pratt, whose term expires, and Theodore Smith were nominated for Allegheny College trusteeship.

Arthur C. Schultz, recommended by Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, was admitted into Pittsburgh conference on trial.

CHILD FATALLY BURNED AS CLOTHES CATCH FIRE

OIL CITY, Pa., Oct. 17.—The frolic of three tots in the kitchen of their home while their mother was momentarily absent cost the life of one, Mary A. Dolby, 4, last night. She succumbed to burns suffered when her clothing caught fire from a gas stove Saturday. She was playing with a sister and a brother, Virginia, 3, and Frederick, 1, at the time. The mother, Mrs. B. Joseph Dolby, was in another part of the house.

SKULL IS FRACTURED IN MYSTERY ATTACK

Lawrence Costello, 38, of 6208 Joseph street, is in the Pittsburgh Hospital suffering from a fractured skull and severe lacerations of the head received in a mystery attack which occurred in a room Costello occupied over a restaurant at 6350 Station street, where he was employed as a cook. Costello was found moaning in the room by Champion Palmer, 28, of 133 Forty-third street, when he came to open the restaurant this morning.

DEATH MAY STOP GRID GAMES

Aroused by the death in Allegheny Valley Hospital, Tarentum, last night of Harry Boroski, 19, senior and star football player of the Har-Brac Union High School, from injuries suffered in a game Saturday, citizens are demanding a cancellation of the remaining games scheduled. A meeting of the school boards of Harrison township and Brackenridge borough, which have supervision of the Union High School, has been called for tonight to take action.

Boroski, one of the most popular youths of the high school, suffered abdominal injuries when he was bowled over while running interference in a game against Turtle Creek High School. He participated in one more play, then collapsed. Smiling to the end after being removed to the hospital, where an operation was performed last night, his last words to Coach Dick Williams were "Well coach, we won the game anyway."

"Sentiment is so strong on dropping the remaining football schedule that the school boards of the two communities feel obliged to meet tonight to take action on the proposed cancellation of games still on schedule," said O. P. Ballentine, principal of the high school, today.

about her wearing apparel and busily mapping out a tour of Paris shops.

"No, I am not certain of my plans after reaching Paris," she confided, "except that I must purchase some frocks and things."

Dressed in knickers, plaid stockings, sweater, shirt and tie to match, she explained:

"I have no clothes except those on my back."

Shortly after the fliers were landed, the Barendrecht departed, with every member of its crew treasuring memories of the rescue of the American Girl after the airplane's oil line had broken.

Because of inclement weather few women on the island ventutred out Sunday. Accordingly, Mlle. Lillie Dillenz, the Viennese actress, and only other transaceanic aviatrix alive, was unable to meet Miss Elder.

The weather prevented the Viennese flier from taking off in her Junkers plane D-1230 for Newfoundland, en route to New York.

PLANE TO MEET THEM

PARIS, Oct. 17.—(INS.)—A 550-horse power Breguet biplane, piloted probably by the well-known French long distance aviator, Capt. Arachart, will leave tomorrow morning for Lisbon to meet Ruth Elder and George Haldeman, who came down in the Atlantic while attempting a non-stop flight from New York to Paris. The plane will be turned over to the Americans upon their arrival at Lisbon so that they may fly to Paris. Preparations for the flight were under way at Coublay Field, near here, today. The plane is equipped with accommodations for two aviators and is powered with a Renault engine. It is the same plane which won the Liberty Cup at Mitchel Field in 1925.

REFUSE MELLON SUIT REVIEW

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—A $500,000 libel suit against Secretary Mellon, brought by Charles B. Brewer who had acted as counsel for a congressional committee in an investigation of charges of duplications in the issue of war loans, will not be reviewed by the Supreme Court.

Brewer's suit was based on a reply made to the President by Secretary Mellon after a report by the committee. The lower courts held that the reply was a privileged communication and dismissed the suit.

EDUCATOR TAKES OWN LIFE; CAUSE MYSTERY

LAWRENCE, Kas., Oct. 17.—(AP.)—Dean Perley F. Walker, of the School of Engineering and Agriculture at the University of Kansas, shot and killed himself in his office early today. The body was discovered by a watchman.

Several letters to friends were found on his desk, including one to Chancellor Lindley, which expressed the hope the chancellor "would not think I am too much of a coward."

Mrs. Walker said the dean spent yesterday afternoon visiting friends and late in the evening told her he was going to his office to write letters. She said he apparently was in good health and that she knew of no motive for his act.

Born in Embden, Me., 52 years ago, Dean Walker graduated from the University of Maine in 1896. He then obtained a master's degree at Cornell. He came to the University of Kansas in 1905 and 10 years later was appointed head of the school of engineering. When the schools of agriculture and engineering were placed under one administrative department, he continued as dean.

He was recognized as an authority on water supply aind had acted as consulting engineer for many municipalities.

Of his immediate family, oply the widow survives. Two children are buried here.

SAYS HUSBAND HAS 2 WIVES

Mrs. Florence Burkhardt, 1030 Banksville road, claims her husband has two wives.

This cropped out today when Attorney Leonard S. Levin presented a petition to Judge Ambrose B. Reid in Common Pleas Court asking for the annulment of her marriage to Lloyd Clifford Burkhardt.

Wife No. 2 claims that she and Burkhardt were married in Greensburg in June, 1924, and that at that time Burkhardt had a wife living, Dorothy E. Burkhardt, whose address is not known to her. The last known address of Burkhardt was West Newton.

Judge Reid ordered papers served on Burkhardt.

CHURCH OPENED IN MT. LEBANON

Two hundred members of the Mt. Lebanon United Lutheran congregation participated yesterday in the dedication of their new $46,000 church building at Academy lane and Washington road. The morning sermon was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Ellis B. Burgess, president of the Pittsburgh Synod of the United Lutheran Church. The Rev. H. M. Ert was in charge of the afternoon service and the Rev. J. J. Myers, missionary superintendent of the Pittsburgh Synod, spoke last night. Services will be held nightly this week. The Rev. Elbert E. Oney is pastor of the church, which was organized in 1925.

MOTHER-TO-BE THUG'S VICTIM

Mrs. Frances Campbell, 23, of 188 Thirty-ninth street, was reported in serious condition in the maternity ward of St. Francis Hospital this morning as a result of being beaten by a thug early yesterday in Fortieth street.

The woman, soon to become a mother, was struck in the face and body by an unidentified man when she refused to accompany him to a nearby park. She was able to give police a good description of her assailant.

Weather Conditions.

The low that was central north of Lake Superior on Saturday morning continued its drift eastward. It was centered over Eastern Ontario yesterday morning, its trough extending southwestward over the Ohio Valley states, and produced the dense cloudiness and light sprinkles of rain over this section yesterday.

The high that covered the far Northwest on Saturday morning is now centered over Western Ontario, highest pressure 30.44 at Port Arthur, and covers the lake region, the central valleys, and most of the Plains states. It is attended by generally clear skies and light to heavy frosts in the lake region and the Ohio Valley states. The heaviest frost of the season occurred over Western Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Following the high is another low pressure area, centered in Northern Alberta this morning. It is causing rising temperatures over the Far West.

LOCAL MAN'S FATHER DIES IN HARNEDVILLE

SOMERSET, Pa., Oct. 17.—Elijah E. McClintock, 86, father of Frank E. McClintock, Pittsburgh, died yesterday at his home at Harnedville.

COUNTY 'CITADEL OF CORRUPT' RAPPED

Terming the County Commissioners' office "the citadel of the corrupt plunderbund," Herman L. Hegner urged the election of C. C. McGovern and George B. Shields at the noon meeting today in the Independent party headquarters, 228 Fourth avenue. He attacked Director of Public Works Norman F. Brown, charging that in Allegheny county the cost of extra work has averaged 30 per cent, while in 39 other states the average was only 7 per cent.

"The plunderbund will not let their meal ticket, the Commissioners' office, slip away from them and will resort to any trick or artifice to hold it," he said. "The exposure of the crookedness in the primary and the thuggery, shooting and killing before the primary show how desperate is this plunderbund. We made a nice beginning in the primary by nominating three independent candidates for the judiciary. If we continue the fight we can destroy the plunderbund and wrest control of the county from it."

G. M. McDonald, another speaker, predicted "that by this time next year the people of this county and state will have been startled by an exposure that will make the Harrisburg capital scandal pale into significance." He also predicted that the person or persons who offered McGovern $100,000 not to run, according to charges made by independent leaders, "will find it convenient to make a sudden trip to Europe before the first of January, for nothing in the world can now prevent Mr. McGovern from becoming a County Commissioner."

FIGHT TO EJECT MINERS OPENS

Ejectment suits against 212 miners and their families of Russelton were filed in Common Pleas Court today for the Republic Collieries Company, a subsidiary of Republican Iron and Steel Company. It was understood no immediate action will be taken against miners by the company.

The court action follows the company's constable sale of miners' furniture at Russelton recently, when some $15,000 furniture was auctioned to meet rental claims.

$9,000 AWARDED COUPLE FOR CRASH WITH TRUCK

A verdict for $9,000 was awarded W. H. Gamble and wife against Armour & Company for injuries suffered by Gamble in an auto accident in Springdale, October 19, 1923, when an Armour truck crashed into Gamble's car.

ELOPES WITH HEIRESS

EDDIE EAGAN AND BRIDE

Eddie Eagan, who worked his way through Yale by all sorts of menial jobs, became the heavyweight boxing champion of Yale and later an Olympic champion, and, while a Rhodes scholar at Oxford, won the amateur heavyweight honors of Great Britain, has, like an Alger hero, married an heiress. He eloped with Miss Margaret Colgate, daughter of Sidney M. Colgate and heiress to the Colgate soap millions, while both were motoring at Saranac Lake, N. Y. Eagan was an aid to Gene Tunney at camp in the preparation for the last fight with Dempsey.

ROAD GUARD SPEEDING TO HURRY-UP CALL IS HURT

OIL CITY, Pa., Oct. 17.—An emergency call for a trivial matter resulted in serious injuries to Theodore Patchen of the state highway patrol last night when he was hurled from his motorcycle while responding to the call. His machine collided with an automobile driven by George E. McGregor. He was thrown into the air and alighted against an iron fence. He is in the Oil City Hospital.

HARRISBURG BANKER GIVEN 15 TO 30 YEARS

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 17.—(AP.)—A. S. Banmiller, central figure in the $700,000 embezzlement of funds of the Commonwealth Trust Company here, today was sentenced to serve not less than 15 nor more than 30 years in the Eastern Penitentiary by President Judge Hargest in Dauphin County Court. In addition he was fined $500 and costs.

DENIED REVIEW OF W. VA. MINE INJUNCTIONS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—The United Mine Workers of America and its president, John L. Lewis, were refused reviews by the Supreme Court today in 12 cases in which the Federal District Court for Southern West Virginia granted injunctions to the Red Jacket Consolidated, the Borderland and other West Virginia coal mining companies, restraining the union and its officers from certain acts in their efforts to unionize coal mines in West Virginia.

The constitutionality of the injunction was attacked by Lewis and the United Mine Workers, particularly the feature which would have the effect they claimed, of preventing them from urging employes of open shop mines to join the union.

The mining companies contended with success in the lower courts that the union, its officers and members, should be prohibited from attempting to persuade their employes from breaking their contracts, which provided that they would not become members of the union. They insisted that the injunction did not prevent their employes from joining the union provided they did not remain in their employ.

STORE HELD UP; SALOON, TOO

Jacob Georgeveh, 6140 Butler street, was held up yesterday by two men in his store. They got $25. Tony Operkoski told police two men held him up in his saloon, 131 South Eighteeth street, and got away with $96, and Harry Bour, 6364 Renfrew street, was relieved of $37 by two Negro footpads in Mintwood street, near Thirtyt-seventh street.

A mink coat valued at $1,696 was stolen from the window of the Sam Schecter fur shop, 223 Oliver avenue, detectives were told.

SECOND FIRE AT OIL PLANT

For the second time within a week fire broke out in the Atlantic Refining company plant at Fifty-fifth street and the Allegheny Valley Railroad, yesterday afternoon. A conveying tube in a high pressure still broke and flames and smoke enveloped the still. The fire was extinguished in a few minutes by steam and chemicals. The damage was slight. A similar fire, which did damage estimated at $3,000, occurred at the plant last Tuesday.

TRIPLE KILLING ENDS JOYOUS AUTO RIDE

By International News Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—A laughing, joyous, automobile ride turned into mysterious tragedy here today when the driver of the machine shot and killed his two pretty girl companions, until recently high school students, hurling their bodies from the car, and then killed himself.

The victims were Miss Margaret Martin, 19; Miss Catherine Stadler, 19, and Wilfred J. Winters, 21, of Brooks, Ind.

At 12:25 a. m. the trio was seen laughing and joking with Winters at the wheel. Fifteen minutes later the body of Miss Stadler, shot through the heart, was thrown from the speeding machine. Fifty feet further the body of Miss Martin, fatally wounded with two bullet wounds, fell from the running board. A few feet further the automobile crashed into a telegraph pole and was demolished. In the debris was found the body of Winters, one bullet wound through the head, a revolver by his side.

What happened in that short interval of 15 minutes to change gaiety into tragedy officials do not know. That a lovers' quarrel was involved was denied strenuously by parents of the three, who stated to police they had been "only good friends."

Miss Stadler had been introduced to Winters within the last few weeks. Winters recently returned from Los Angeles and was suffering from tuberculosis, police learned. He expected to start to work today as a taxicab driver as physicians advised him to seek outdoor work.

"Catherine left early last night," her father told detectives. "She said she was going to call upon Margaret and later go to a dance hall."

START $250,000 ADDITION TO CAMBRIDGE, O., PLANT

CAMBRIDGE, O., Oct. 17.—A $250,000 addition to its plant here has been started by the Atlas-Globe China Company. When completed, the number of employes of the company will be increased from 250 to 600.

Cautious Snake Is World's Best Pedestrian

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—The snake has been found to be the model pedestrian.

"Go to the snake, thou jaywalker," proposes Dr. Raymond L. Dittmars, curator of reptiles of the New York Zoological Gardens, who regards the snake as the perfect tutor against the perils of pedestrianism.

Intrigued by the statistics that hardly a tenth as many snakes are run over by automobiles as perished under the slow moving wheels of farm wagons and buggies a decade or so ago, Dr. Ditmars conducted a 1,200-mile tour of New York state and returned with the reason.

"I watched a snake crossing the road," he said. "It wiggled along at the side for 50 feet until it came to a culvert. There it paused, looked first to the left, then to the right, appeared to listen, and only then slipped across."

HELD FOR COURT ON GIRL CHARGE

Accused of an attack on Josephine Beickosky, 17, of Heidelberg, last May, Andy Domoluski, 19, of 3049 Phelan way, was held for court on a serious charge by Magistrate A. D. Brandon in Morals Court today.

While he and a companion were taking the girl to her place of employment in Squirrel Hill, it is alleged, the two attacked her. The companion has not been apprehended. The girl is to be taken to a local hospital for an operation made necessary by the brutal treatment at the hands of the men, police testified.

UNIONTOWN PASTOR, HURT IN FALL ON STEPS, DIES

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Oct. 17.—The Rev. E. T. Eastburn, 75, died today in Uniontown Hospital, one week after he had fallen down five steps in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Blanch Newcomer. He had retired some years ago.

All's Lovely

MARIA JERITZA

She had no quarrel with anyone in the Vienna Opera Company, Maria Jeritza stated emphatically upon her return for the winter season in American opera houses. It had been bruited about that someone stepped on Mme. Jeritza's train during a performance, and she had refused to take part in any performance with the stepping person thereafter.

An Old-fashioned, Home-made Apple Pie, ea. 38c

Made from these crisp, Northern Spy Apples in our own ovens. Plenty of sliced apples, seasoned with cinnamon, encased in a crisp, crinkly crust. Apple Pie like this is one of the old favorites.

Sweet Apple Cider, gal. 59c

Pressed right on the farm from this year's apples. Sweet, wholesome, just as it comes from the press. No preservative is used. Glass jug included.

Apple Butter, jar (1 lb.—14oz.) 29c

Old-fashioned Apple Butter that reminds you of the days when the big kettle was set up in the backyard and, as a little tad, you had to stir it with a long, wooden stirrer. Fragrant with cinnamon and other aromatic spices. Wholesome and nutritious. Excellent for the youngsters.

Apple Dumplings, 2 for 25c

How long since you enjoyed this old-time dessert? A tart apple, peeled and cored and the center filled with sugar and cinnamon which oozes out over the crisp crust during the baking. Serve with cream or a sauce.

A smack o' salt . . .

Tang! Zest! Like a whiff of the sea. That's the salt on Sunshine Krispy Crackers. It emphasizes their delicate wheat flavor as nothing else can.

Tenderly crisp they are—and oh so light and flaky. But they are able bodied biscuits too, full of vigorous food value. Per pound they contain more calories than white bread.

PAYNE HONORED AT HOME TOWN MEMORIAL

By Universal Service.

WEST NEW YORK, N. J., Oct. 17.—Ten thousand persons attended the memorial services here for the late Philip Payne, managing editor of the New York Daily Mirror, who was lost at sea on the New York-to-Rome plane Old Glory. The exercises were held in front of the West New York municipal building. They were conducted by the Charles H. Cusick post of the American Legion, which Mr. Payne, a resident of West New York, helped to organize. The post commander, Irwin Rubenstein, acted as master of ceremonies.

A temporary cenotaph was placed on the sidewalk in front of the municipal building, which was draped in black. The flags were half-masted. A picture of Mr. Payne hung over the main entrance of the building. A piece of the wreckage of Old Glory was suspended over the cenotaph.

Mayor Walker, of New York, and Haddon Ivins, publisher of the Hudson Dispatch and for many years an intimate friend of the late editor, and Commander Rubenstein, paid tribute to Mr. Payne.

Peggy Joyce and many other stage stars were present. So were former Mayor John F. Hylan, of New York City, and many political personages of New York and New Jersey.

The Rev. Harry Leurich, the post chaplain, conducted the regular American Legion funeral service, and afterwards presented to West New York a resolution offering the town a collection of war relics to be used as a permanent memorial museum for Philip Payne in the West New York Library.

W. R. Hearst Pays High Tribute to Philip Payne

WEST NEW YORK, N. J., Oct. 17.—The following message sent by William Randolph Hearst was read at the Philip Payne memorial services here:

Los Angeles, Cal.

Irwin Rubenstein, Commander Cusick Post, American Legion, West New York, N. J.:

I am extremely sorry that I am unable to reach New York in time to attend the memorial of Phil Payne. I am glad that there is to be a Phil Payne memorial to maintain his memory as an inspiration to all those who admire competent, conscientious and heroic devotion to higher ideals.

(Signed)

LIBRA PEOPLE ARE FOND OF PLEASURE
I'M OFF ON A CRUISE!
THEY ARE FOND OF TRAVEL
THOSE BORN BETWEEN SEPT. 23 & OCT. 23 ARE LIBRA
"THE BALANCE"
FAY KING

By FAY KING.

IT has been said by students of astrology that those born between September 23 and October 23 are best qualified to succeed by themselves.

They should, in fact, be very careful in forming partnerships and rely upon their own decisions.

Libra is "the balance," and these people are born with a splendid sense of justice, looking upon all questions in an unbiased way, and judging from both sides.

They are intuitive and should act upon their own impressions and judgments, and not permit themselves to be influenced by others.

One of their faults is that they are a bit imitative and inclined to be swayed by those they admire. That is why they should make important decisions alone.

Their ruling planet, Venus, next to Jupiter, is the most beneficial. It endows them with an affectionate nature, quick judgment, a fondness for pleasure and a deep loyalty to friends.

Personal freedom means a great deal to Libra people. They heartily dislike being questioned and making explanations. Detail and routine bores them.

In its best aspect, Venus makes for affability and artistic tastes. In its bad aspect for self-indulgence and carelessness.

They are liberal, but not spendthrifts. Their sense of foresight causes them to look out for the future.

They like change and are enthusiastic in their pursuit of knowledge through travel and study.

They are usually good-natured and amiable, but when they are angry there is no doubt about it!

They should not marry in haste, for much of their happiness in life depends upon harmony in their home. They should be sure their mate is congenial, else they are better off to remain single.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Tuesday, October 18

*These things come to you from yourself and from the gods.—*Epictetus.

PROPITIOUS indeed are the gifts of the gods on this day, judging by the powerful influences beaming from important planets.

The lunar trine to Saturn should remove some tenacious obstacle and delay. This is likely to be a most precipitate affair, moved under the powerful disintegrating force of Uranus. It will make way for new and constructive measures, but be not rash in financial manipulation.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of splendid opportunity to push cherished and long delayed projects, possibly after a violent disruption of old congestions, making way for new achievement and new environment. But it is urged that wise management of funds be exercised.

A child born on this day may be ingenious, inventive and original as well as industrious and responsible. These should bring splendid success, but it may need training in the management of capital.

For the Lovelorn

A Nurse

DEAR MISS GALE:

May I have a few words to say in your wonderful column? I want to see if I can't help to stop those young men from talking about us girls. I read all the lovelorn columns in all the papers and notice how the fellows say that girls are "no good." That is pretty frank to say it out so broad. That may be true, and that may not. There are a million good girls to one bad girl. The only time a fellow has anything to say about a girl, is when it is something not very nice. One fellow, a pretty nice young man, whom I had a talk with recently, said: "Girls don't want anything but love, money, kisses and good times. They are not good enough to walk along any front street, but should take to all back alleys only." I replied by saying, "Do you realize that you are knocking me as well as your own sister when you say that." I watched his face wince and then after a few moments deliberation, he said, "Well, you and sis are different than all the rest." I said to him, "Isn't you think that almost every fellow that is in love with a girl as you are with me, says that? Would you like a fellow to say something mean about your sister? Would you want him to say that about me?" He said, "Just let any one try it and he'll be sorry for it." "Think about other girls then, too," I said. Hasn't this conversation got some truth in it? The fellows are all apes. Who will deny it? Who started to roll their socks, who started to go without hats, who started to wear bracelets, who started to go without coats and who started to wear fancy hose? The girls did, but they have now discarded this and the boys have picked it up. In other words, the boys have mocked the girls just like an ape mocks a human being. Most modern boys are just big jokes, but they don't know it. I never intend to get married, but when I do choose a man, it will be a farmer. They live their lives.

A NURSE.

Well, at least the girls have one staunch defender. But I quite agree with you in saying that men resent a discussion of the women of their own families, even though they may talk about others.

Puzzled

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a young man 22 years of age, and like many others I am laying my troubles before you, hoping you will help me. I love a young girl 16 years of age who comes to see my sister every day. My whole trouble is this Miss Gale: If I ask her to do anything she always does it. She is kind and sympathetic but at times she is so indifferent towards me. Sometimes I think she likes me and at others I think she doesn't. I wonder, Miss Gale, if it's my actions that cause her to believe that I don't love her since I once kidded her that I hated her. She had told a friend of mine that the fellow she loves doesn't love her. I am somewhat puzzled over this and I believe your good advice will help me.

PUZZLED.

In the first place, Puzzled, this girl is too young to know her own mind, and probably has no idea whether or not she loves you. Her actions may be attributed to her youth, so just wait a few years and time will solve your difficulties.

DEAR MISS GALE:

I feel as if I ought not to do this, but I must put my heart at rest. Perhaps, after I have told you all, it will be at peace. It is so troubled, so lost, so forlorn, because of this: I was, and still am, in love with the dearest boy. For one whole half year life was like an enchanting bubble blown from that mysterious pipe we call Life. I gave him all my love and asked nothing in return but his, and I thought I had it. For six whole months no sad thought troubled my happy heart. I lived only in the present, but thought happily of a wonderful future with him. What has happened, I cannot understand, but only know that I have lost him. Why? is the question I cannot fathom, cannot probe to find the answer. I live only in the past few months of happiness I had, dreading to think of the sad future which I shall have to pass through alone. Each night I am haunted by his laughing hazel eyes, his sweet laughing mouth, his tender kisses; each night I pray to God to bring me back my lost lover, but my prayer remains unanswered. I look into a future of utter loneliness, but still cling to one little straw of hope. No, I have not lost hope nor yet given up in despair. Perhaps some day he will return to me. I ask nothing of you but that understanding which you alone can give to one who needs it.

I can only sympathize with you, my dear, and hope that your unhappiness will grow less as time passes.

Signs That Tell Baby's Physical Condition

DR. COPELAND

IN THE case of an infant there are three organs which must be checked up on every day. They are the kidneys, skin and bowels.

As you see, these are the organs of elimination, as they are called. That is, they are the organs which carry away the waste materials.

We take food and drink. They pass into the stomach and, from that organ, into the small intestine. Gradually the intake is prepared for absorption into the blood. In due course of time all that is valuable is used by the system. The useless material goes on into the large intestine and rectum.

If this worthless mass is permitted to remain in the bowel it is not long before it begins to ferment. Poisons are generated and some of these may be absorbed by the lining membrane of the lower bowel. As you would expect, this results in discomfort or actual illness.

The blood goes through the body, carrying the building and repair materials supplied by the food. On its return journey it brings the poisons and wastes which have developed in the active muscles and all the cells of the system.

The kidneys are given the baby to dispose of these substances. If they do not filter from the blood the products of growth and repair, there will be ill effects at once. There must be cleansing of blood so that it can be free to carry on its other functions, the feeding of the cells.

In a less conspicuous manner, the skin carries away some of the waste materials. It has another function—the regulation of the temperature of the body. But it is in the activity of the skin as one of the eliminating organs that we are interested today.

There cannot be free elimination of waste without an intake of quantities of fluids. This is true of grown-ups, as it is of babies. In infants, of course, there is a diet made up exclusively of fluids. But the milk contains solids in material quantities and so the baby needs water as well as milk.

By all means, then, give your baby water between feedings. It has thirst and can suffer from it, but whether it seems to suffer or not, the infant should have water.

The water will moisten the waste materials and help to keep the bowels free. The more water there is the more readily will the blood do its part in dissolving the rejected substances. This will aid the kidneys and skin in carrying away this portion of the waste.

The skin should be moist and be free from irritation. The urine should not be too highly colored. The bowels should act freely.

Dryness of the skin, highly colored urine and constipation are symptoms which should be called to the attention of your doctor. But if you are careful in your feedings and supply abundant water, it is probable all will go well.

Answers to Health Queries

S. A. Q.—What do you advise for constipation?

2.—What is the cause of dizziness?

A.—Eat simple, well-cooked food. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for further particulars and repeat your question.

2.—May be due to indigestion, constipation, biliousness or high blood pressure.

WHY WOMEN LOOK FADED

Science says long retention of wastes in bowels invites system poisoning, which doctors call Toxemia—it being the underlying cause of unsightly skin blemishes that ruin complexion and make folks look faded and old. Any one of forty symptoms may mean oncoming Toxemia—languidness, backache, worry over trifles, nervousness, sleeplessness, poor appetite, any miserable feeling—it's time to act! Take Partola—in pleasant, mint-flavored, mild acting, laxative tablets. Rid your system of poisonous wastes, then watch skin clear up, complexion become radiantly beautiful, youthful appearance return. Any good druggist sells regular box 10c, double size 25c.

Sugar-coating Trouble

Nature Sets Her Own Standards and Lays Down Her Own Rules

The quotation given here from a Health Bulletin by Dr. Copeland, formerly Health Commissioner of the City of New York, is worthy of the thoughtful consideration of sufferers from constipation. It is the opinion of a nationally known health authority. Read it carefully.

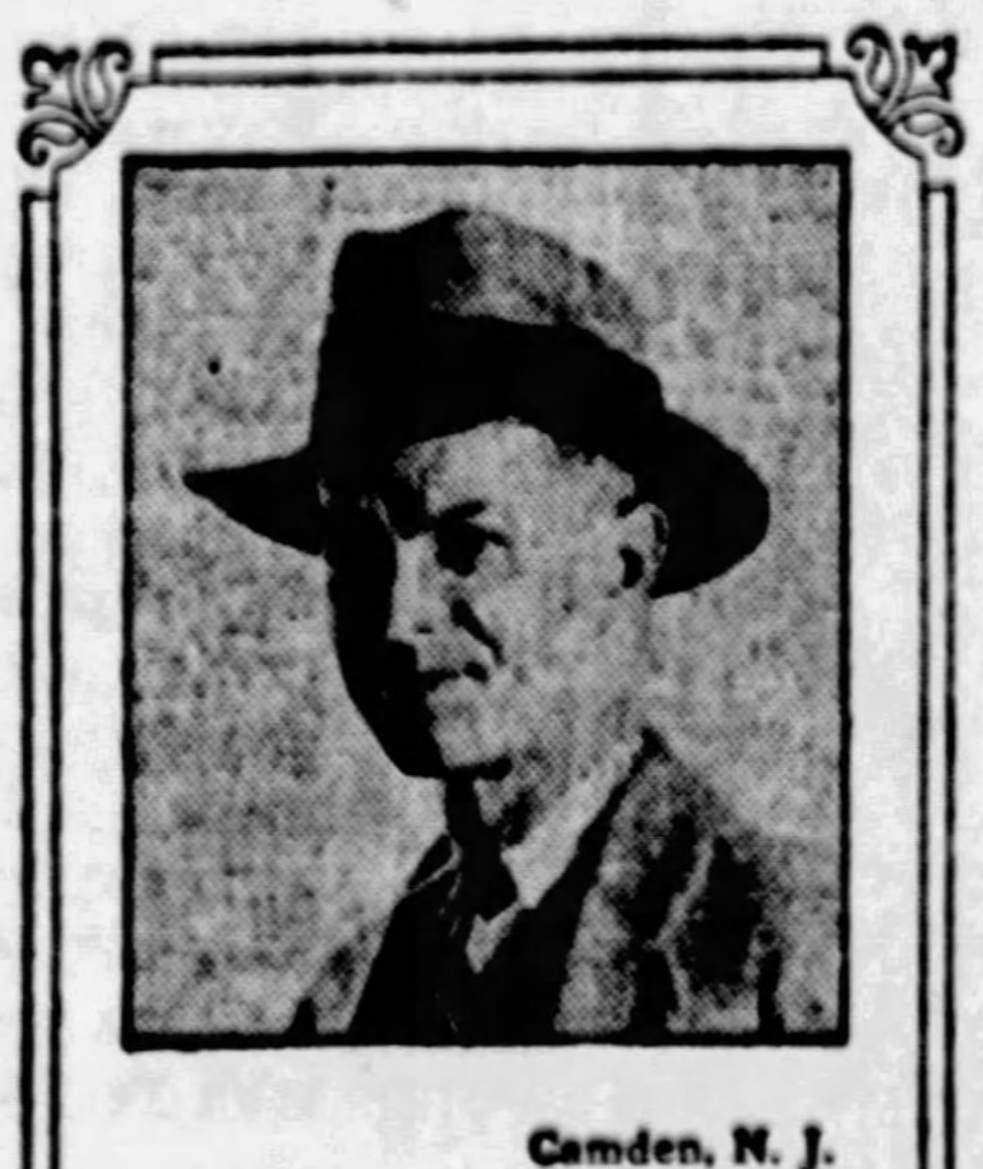
The reference to water, with the proper mineral content, describes accurately Pluto Water, which for more than a generation has been recommended by physicians for constipation, however stubborn. Pluto Water "flushes the bowels and washes away the impurities."

It relieves constipation in 30 minutes to 2 hours after drinking. It is gentle, prompt, pleasant and non-habit forming. Remember, that however introduced, sugar-coated or otherwise, drastic drugs weaken the normal functions of the intestinal tract, and gradually enslave the user.

Pluto Water is bottled at the Springs, French Lick, Indiana. It is sold at all drug counters and at fountains. Use Pluto Water—insure regularity and good health.

ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York and formerly Health Commissioner of the City of New York

Dr. Copeland says: "Mineral waters of the right sort are preferable to many of the cathartic compounds on the market. Their power to overcome the immediate effects of constipation is unquestioned. They are soothing and healing to the tissues. Sugar coated pills are pleasant to take which may add to their danger. That is the reason they are coated with sugar. They are no less drastic and habit-forming because they appeal to the taste. Mineral waters pass through the system, doing nothing else but to flush and cleanse the intestinal tract."



Camden, N. J.
April 30, 1927

My doctor recommended Pluto Water to me twelve years ago, and I have learned to value it more every passing year. Its rapid action has saved my family countless colds and sickness—we always keep it on hand.

FUNDAMENTAL PLAN TOPIC AT BIBLE UNION

The creed of absolute fundamentalism was expounded today at the second day sessions of the interdenominational Bible conference here under the direction of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago. Noon meetings will be held each day in the First Presbyterian Church, Sixth avenue, where the conference also will meet at 2:30 daily until Friday. Night sessions will be held in the First United Presbyterian Church, North Side, and the East Liberty Presbyterian Church.

Speakers, who will alternate at the various churches, include the Rev. Dr. James M. Gray, president of the institute; the Rev. Dr. William P. White; Dr. F. B. Meyer, of London; Dr. John A. Faulkner, of the Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J.; Dr. J. Graham Machen, of Princeton Theological Seminary; Dr. Henry Howard and Dr. Harold P. Sloan.

Music is in charge of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Bittikofer and Mr. and Mrs. Loren G. Jones, of the institute extension department.

FREE DETECTIVE OF GRAFT

A graft charge preferred against Florence Brunner, precinct detective of the Center Avnue Station, by Lena Washington, Negro proprietor of a speakeasy at Logan street and Wylie avenue, failed to stick before the Police Trial Board. This became known yesterday when Brunner appeared in Morals Court to testify against other defendants. The police board hearing was held Tuesday and it was said the Washington woman was not clear about the alleged exchange of money to Brunner for information about a scheduled raid on her establishment.

ROBBERS FLEE IN CARNEGIE

Carnegie police today were attempting to run down two men who escaped Saturday amid a fusilade of shots after they had been stopped for questioning concerning the robbery of two stores in the borough on Friday. Several revolvers were taken from the hardware store of William Scott & Co., 214 East Main street, and $44 from the A. & P. store at 212 East Main street.

CRETONNES

45c yard

Gray, colorful cretonnes to brighten the house during the indoor season, by way of curtains and slip covers and cushions. Most of them are 36 inches wide. Printed on good quality cloths — light weave for chintz patterns; heavier twill, shiki and crash weaves for striking, large patterns.

An extensive showing of colors and patterns.

Many pieces use eight to twelve colors to form patterns upon which sunlight and laundering have little effect.

Ben Lyon "Loaned" to Universal To Play Hero in Marion Nixon's New Film, "Honeymoon Flats"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17.

A NEW co-starring team is Ben Lyon and Marion Nixon. You ask me how that can be since Ben Lyon belongs to First National and Marion Nixon is a Universal player? Very simple, my dear, very simple, indeed. Ben Lyon has been loaned to Universal to play the male lead in "Honeymoon Flats," an Earl Deer Biggers story, opposite Miss Nixon.

Millard Webb, the director, is already at Universal City getting ready to shoot. Others in the cast are Gwen Lee and Byrant Washburn. Another word, please. The scenario is by Morton Blumenstock and the story is being supervised by Joseph Francis Poland.

I am told that Ben Lyon expects to make four pictures before he goes to New York. Personally, I don't think he will stay away from Manhattan that long. He admits there is a strong attraction there. Her name is Marilyn Miller.

The bride, Mrs. Irving Thalberg—perhaps I should say Norma Shearer when I speak of her film career, is preparing to appear in an original story by A. P. Younger, which deals with the trials and tribulations of a traveling saleswoman. From Norma's description it sounds something like "His Secretary," which many people consider her best picture. Sam Wood will direct her and work will be started at once. I wish I could tell you the name of the picture, but Norma said, when she and Irving discussed it, it had no name. That's what happens many times in the movies. A picture gets started with everything but a name. "Trelawney of the Wells" is only postponed until Sidney Franklin is able to direct it. Norma said that she could not see any other director in this Mid-Victorian tale but Mr. Franklin and—well, Irving may be boss, but Norma has a few things to say too in this case. Irving probably agrees with her, for anyone who saw "Quality Street," a Marion Davies' picture, will agree that Sidney Franklin is a director worth waiting for.

Betty Jewel has landed in Southampton. At least a little note posted there conveys the fact that she is ready to begin work on two pictures in London. Before the camera is so much as cranked, however, she is going to take a flying trip through Paris and Italy. I don't know whether she means a hurried trip or one in an airplane. She says she's homesick and longs for Hollywood, so I suppose she will be coming back before we know it.

Here is a postscript to the Andy Rice matter. If you remember, I mentioned that he had written the last George White "Scandals." Immediately upon reading this, Ben Holtzman wired me denying the story. Now Mr. Rice writes to say:

"Today's refutation by Ben Holtzman of your mention of me in your column a few days ago brings to mind the story of Cohn, who told Levy that Ginsberg made $10,000 in real estate in St. Louis. Levy, who, like Mr. Holtzman, was a stickler for truth, replied that Cohn had the whole thing wrong. It was in Milwaukee and not in St. Louis, it was clothing and not real estate and he lost $10,000 instead of making $10,000. To straighten out things all around, may I say I have written three George White 'Scandals,' but not the current one. I am known as 'Andy' and do not expect to be called Andrew until I have written the great American drama."

I am reminded of the old saying, "On again, off again, gone again, Finnigan," in the casting of Dorothy Revier. First they announce she is to play in Richard Barthelmess' next picture. Then Columbia denies that she is free to play this part. I don't know that it is so awfully important to the world at large. Still, one likes to be correct. This, Harry Cohn tells me, is final. Miss Revier has been recalled by Columbia to play the lead in the next George Seitz production and will not be in the Barthelmess drama.

"Play in Gilda Gray's pictures and see the world" might be a very appropriate slogan. Gil Boag is just back from a business trip to New York, where he arranaged for a presentation of "The Devil Dancer." With Gilda Gray will be the girls who played in the picture. Lucky girls! It means not only a trip to New York, but a trip with Miss Gray to the various key cities.

Maude Fulton, who is a playwright and a stage actress, has been doing her best to confine her talents to writing. But in Hollywood they won't let her. They know of her talent as an actress and they insist upon her playing in films. She has recently been signed for one of the chief feminine characters in "Free and Easy" at the Fox studio opposite Madge Bellamy.

Helene Costello Film Based on Stage Hit

Helene Costello, who has just completed an important role in "Good Time Charley," featuring Warner Oland, has now been selected as one of the principals for "In Name Only." John Miljan and Hugh Herbert are also recent additions to the cast which will feature Owen Moore. "In Name Only" is adapted from the stage hit by Edwin Justin Mayer.

Heads Loew's

NICHOLAS M. SCHENCK

Mr. Schenck, formerly general manager of the Loew Circuit, has succeeded the late Marcus Loew as president of Loew's Incorporated. Mr. Schenck is a brother of Joseph M. Schenck, motion picture producer and husband of Norma Talmadge. They both became associated with Mr. Loew when the latter purchased their little theater in Brooklyn. The new head of the great Loew enterprises began with no stipulated salary, which later was set at $50 a week.

NEW PLAY BILLS ARE VARIED

Tonight in the Alvin "Artists and Models" will be shown, with a cast headed by Ted Lewis and his Musical Clowns, Florence Moore, Jack Pearl and Jack Osterman. Matinees will be Wednesday and Saturday.

The Pitt will begin its regular season tonight with "The Medicine Man," Elliott Lester's new play. Minor Watson, who played the cowboy in "Howdy King," in the Pitt last season, plays the title role in this new play.

Opening in the Nixon tonight will be "The Cocoanuts," with the Marx Brothers. "The Cocoanuts" feature Olga Elder in the company supporting the stars.

The stage feature in the Davis this week is presented by Rose's Midgets, appearing in a song and dance review.

Ramon Novarro is appearing in the Penn for one week in latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "The Road to Romance."

Dan Mason, who plays in "Out All Night," this week's screen feature in the Aldine, lays claim to being the oldest character actor in films today.

A stage attraction in the Grand this week features Don Barclay, presenting his "movie," "A Romance of the North Woods."

Joe Melino, pantomime comedian, is in "Nite Hawks," this week's burlesque in the Academy.

"The Constant Nymph" is coming to the Nixon, beginning Monday, October 24. The play ran the greater part of last season in New York. Beatrix Thomson the Claude Rains, who played in the New York production, are the featured players.

"My Maryland," an operetta, will be here next week for an engagement in the Alvin. Olga Cook is the principal singer.

Laura Hope Crews in "The Silver Cord," a New York Theater Guild presentation of last season, will be seen in the Pitt next week.

GLORIA'S HUSBAND BACK IN HOLLYWOOD

Having complied with immigration regulations which require him to return to France every six months until he can come in under a regular quota, Henri de Marquise de Falaise, better known in Hollywood as "Hank," husband of Gloria Swanson, is back in Hollywood. Henri resumed his occupation of selling automobiles.

Dolores' Mate May Become Actor

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17.—Hymie del Rio, husband of Dolores del Rio, may play a role in FBO's "Bread of the Sunset," starring Bob Steele. Wallace Fox, brother of Edwin Carewe, will direct the picture and has already taken tests of del Rio.

Del Rio has also been writing original screen stories and has already sold two to Carewe and M-G-M.

Carewe feels that Miss del Rio rates a star bungalow. He is having a three-room dressing room bungalow built for her on the Tec-Art lot.

Screen Star Host To Famous Musician

Richard Barthelmess is to host these days to Jascha Heifetz, world-famous violinist, who has just recently arrived in Hollywood from Hawaii after a year's concert tour encircling the world.

Barthelmess, who is shortly to commence production on "The Noose" for First National, first met Heifetz last winter in New York and was a fellow traveler aboard the France en route to Europe. They became staunch friends and spent a great deal of time together in Paris in company with Georges Carpentier, the French ring idol, who was also a fellow passenger.

Katherine Young Wilson, the star's affianced bride, who is now visiting California, is helping to entertain the violin virtuoso during his brief stay here. Isador Achron, accompanist and composer of "Hebrew Melody," is with Heifetz. Barthelmess is planning a series of brilliant social events at his Beverly Hills residence in honor of the violinist.

Lita Grey Patient; Not Hurrying For Job

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Lita Grey Chaplin, with matrimonial freedom and a sizable bankroll to help start life anew, is still in New York waiting for her big chance in show business.

Unlike Peaches Browning, she remains aloof from cabaret offers. Also on her taboo list are picture houses and vaudeville. In fashion shows she is faintly interested.

Apparently there haven't been any worthwhile overtures from the legitimate stage, but there has been some royal entertaining in the Grey quarters at the Park Central, which may bring results.

Miss Grey also has had her voice tested by the Victor Company.

LARRY SEMON IN ACT ON VAUDEVILLE STAGE

Larry Semon of motion picture fame, is doing a six-week tour on the Loew vaudeville circuit. He opened in Detroit.

Hospital Cot Club Will Give "Haunted House"

SEWICKLEYANS—and a lot of Pittsburghers, too—will make their way tomorrow night to Guildhall to see the Sewickley Valley Hospital Cot Club's twenty-first annual production, Owen Davis' comedy, "The Haunted House." The club has taken infinite pains with this play and has made a particularly happy choice in its cast, and it is more than likely that the audience will get what it has learned to expect from this organization, a polished performance. One reason why so many Pittsburgh people will go down to the valley for the play is that the club is not permitted, on account of copyright difficulties, to follow its usual custom and give a performance in Pittsburgh.

WANTS TO VISIT US

QUEEN MARIE

The queen regent of Rumania, Marie, would like to some day make the visit to Pittsburgh that was dropped from her American tour. So M. Cretzianos, Rumanian minister, disclosed at the Carnegie Institute Founder's Day banquet.

The Sewickley Valley Hospital is the first to acknowledge its debt of gratitude to the club, which was really organized for the purpose of endowing a cot annually, but has since greatly enlarged its scope. Its first president, Mrs. George Phelps Rose, is still at the helm and with her years of experience in amateur theatricals, is general director for the productions.

It would be interesting to know how many remember the old Sewickley Valley Dramatic Club, which was in existence in the late 90s and the early part of this century, with the young girls and boys of the valley as members. Mrs. Rose belonged to that club, too, and another member was Mrs. Robert Franks, of East Orange, N. J., who was then Thetta Quay, daughter of the late Matthew S. Quay. Mrs. Franks' husband is connected with the Carnegie Endowment Fund, and they were back in the city last week to attend Founder's Day.

That club was disbanded, but when the Sewickley Valley Hospital was being built three or four years later, it was reorganized as the Cot Club, with the purpose of giving benefit performances. And when the hospital found itself in need of an annex for contagious diseases, the club dropped its original idea of merely endowing a cot, and built the annex. But in later years the growth of the institution has made it necessary to use the annex for a laboratory and recitation rooms for nurses, and it is known as the Cot Club Annex. The organization's aim now is an endowment in perpetuity and $3,000 of the necessary $5,000 has already been earned.

The old Dramatic Club was in existence at the same time that the Tuesday Night Club was giving its amateur plays here in the city, and the two organizations followed along the same lines for several years. It will be recalled, of course, that the Tuesday Night Club is the parent of the present Stage and Play Society.

Those taking part in tomorrow night's performance are Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Arrott, Mrs. Benjamin P. Bakewell, Mrs. John B. Dumont, Jr., Lowell W. Nichols, James B. Cullum, Jr., J. Reuben Rose, George O. Richardson, Alvin K. Haworth, Joseph D. Porter and Thomas Leggate.

The marriage of Miss Nellie Blanche Hiester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Hiester, of Park avenue, Crafton, and Eugene Leslie Hofmann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Hofmann, of Carnegie, will be solemnized tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Hiester home by the Rev. John S. Allison, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Crafton. The bride will wear white transparent velvet and rose point lace, with a tulle veil secured with a cap of lace, and will carry orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Martha Hoge is to be maid of honor, wearing pink Queen Elizabeth crepe and velvet, and carrying a colonial bouquet. The flower girls will be Sylvia Catherine and Dorothy Janet Hiester, small sisters of the bride, wearing yellow and orchid taffeta and carrying colonial bouquets. Robert Hofmann is to be his brother's best man and Mrs. Gerald R. Mead will play the wedding music. Mr. and Mrs. Hofmann will take a trip to the coast, and after December 1 will be at home in South Grandview avenue, Crafton.

Mrs. R. G. Sommerfeld, of East End avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kammerer and their son, of Beechwood boulevard, have returned home after spending the last four months motoring through Italy, France, Germany, Switzerland and Spain.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Hampton P. Abney, Jr., who were married October 6, have been spending their honeymoon in Bermuda. On their way back to Dallas, Tex., where they will make their home, they have stopped off in Baltimore where Mrs. Abney will act as matron of honor at the wedding of Miss Dorothy Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Hamilton of Philadelphia, formerly of Pittsburgh, and Allan C. Davis, of Baltimore. Mrs. Abney will be remembered as Miss Dorothy McKee, of Wilkinsburg.

The annual Seton Hill ball is scheduled for Thanksgiving Eve, November 23, in the William Penn Hotel. Mrs. Frank T. Page is general chairman for the ball which is sponsored by alumnae of the Greensburgh school.

Mrs. Wallace Hurtte Rowe and her daughter, Miss Eleanor H. Rowe of Morewood avenue, have returned from Watch Hill, R. I., where they spent the summer.

* * *

Miss Coeina and Miss Betty Ruch of Stratford avenue are spending October with their aunt, Mrs. C. R. Bonnett, of Bryn Mawr, Pa.

BAKED
that's the way you like them

Baked, in ovens, in the real old fashioned way. Baked until they are plump, mealy and tender—baked until they are a rich and golden brown—baked until they are nearly ready to burst with their own goodness. Baked until the beans "drink up" the Heinz delicious tomato sauce in which they come.

It is the oven-baking that makes Heinz Baked Beans so tender, so good to eat, so digestible.

Only because they are baked, can Heinz Beans be labeled "Baked". Beans not baked cannot be labeled "Baked" · · The taste is the test.

ADDITIONAL SOCIETY, CLUBS

Mrs. Thomas Pringle, of Reynolds street, is chairman of reservations for the bridge luncheon to be given October 24 in the Schenley Arms by the Dilworth Hall Alumnae Association. Invitations are extended to all graduates of the school and former students.

M'KEESPORT JUNIORS TO HEAR TRAVEL TALK

It is interesting to note how the juniors, the young women who are standing by ready to take up the torch of club work as older hands lay it down, are broadening in their interests. To the club editor's desk comes an exceedngly neat booklet—the first year book of the McKeesport Woman's Club Junior Auxiliary, one of the youngest of these club children. Miss Jean Johnston is president of the organization and her official family includes Mrs. Joseph Gephart and Miss Helen Edmundson, vice presidents; Miss Martha Richey, recording secretary, Miss Harriet Long, correspondng secretary; treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Young. President's day was held early in the month and now these girls are sailing into their season with a course well charted for the year's voyage. On Tuesday they will hear discussed foreign and domestic travel by four members, next month Elmer Kenyon, president of the Pittsburgh Dream League, will talk to them on some phase of the drama, and later in the month the girls themselves will give a play. A Christmas program gives promise of something else exceptionally good and for the Christmas party a three-act play is on the chart. Book reviews, special celebrations, papers on well chosen subjects and a quiz meeting are among the things to which the members look forward.

President's day will be observed by the South Hills Woman's Club on Wednesday evening in the Bane school auditorium in honor of the new president, Mrs. Mayme James. The program chairman is Mrs. Fred Jones; flower chairman, Mrs. F. A. Chamberlain; hostess chairman, Mrs. Lillian Limbach, and assisting hostesses are Mrs. Monica Coates, Mrs. Clara Gessel, Mrs. Clara Rowland, Mrs. Mary Limbach, Mrs. Rose Young, Mrs. Edith Barrett, Mrs. LaRue Lane, Mrs. Jessie Reith, Mrs. Mathilda Doerschner, Miss Clara Brown and Mrs. Beatrice Montgomery.

A junior dance will be given on Monday evening, October 24, in the school, with the dance committee, Mrs. LaRue Lane, chairman, in charge.

The only service of its kind in Pittsburgh

Boggs & Buhl's

Consulting Dressmaker

This store stepped to the front in its Fabric Exposition early in September and offered the women of the community this service, which they had long needed. The response was overwhelming! It has taken a full month to handle the hundreds of appointments booked then. Now we can accept new appointments and the brief resume below will give some idea of the helpful scope of the Boggs & Buhl service.

Consulting Dressmaker

More women would make their dresses if they felt confident of success—the assistance of someone who knows will be a big help. The B & B Dressmaker will help you select patterns and the correct materials and will gladly intruct you in any part of dressmaking you find difficult.

Patterns Altered to Individual Measure Gratis

Any pattern you select will be altered to your individual measurements without charge.

Guaranteed Cutting and Pin Fitting at Small Charge

Any woman or girl will appreciate what this means! Your dress practically made for you—you have merely to run up the seams and finish them. You may make any type of dress you wish at very small cost.

Full details at the B & B Consultant Dressmaker's Desk on the 1st Floor.

The LIFE AND LETTERS OF WOODROW WILSON

A Prodigious Worker, Yet Wilson Could Play

Lecturing, Writing and Studying—Always Studying—Wilson Kept Abreast of Events—Disappointed In Harrison

Wilson's hard labors at Bryn Mawr and his furious writing—of political science articles that were acceptable to publishers and essays and stories that were not—were described in yesterday's installment of "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson" in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. He worked so hard because a second daughter was born and living expenses were constantly increasing. Disappointed in a new contract with Bryn Mawr, he eagerly accepted an engagement at Wesleyan University in Connecticut where he was to teach men. Here his life and work were delightful and he entered into the college sports, becoming a coach to the football team.

By RAY STANNARD BAKER

Public Interests and Home Life

THESE college activities, however, made up only a part of the man's extraordinary labors. He was giving also a series of twenty-five lectures each year at Johns Hopkins and was much on call for addresses—at Hartford, at Northampton, at Brown University and elsewhere. He was busy with his writing, finishing in the spring of 1889 the last proofs of "The State"—which was published last fall.

And "The State" was not well out of the way before he accepted the invitation of Prof. A. B. Hart, of Harvard, to contribute to the "Epoch" series a volume which was later known as "Division and Reunion," and upon this he began work at once. It was a subject that much interested him, the period of American history from 1829 to 1889, a period much misrepresented by writers both North and South, since it covered the bitter years of sectional division. He wrote to Prof. Hart, June 3, 1889:

"Let me say that I particularly appreciate your reference to judging the part played by the South during the period of which I am to write. Your confidence in my impartiality I greatly value—and shall hope to deserve. Though born in the South and bred in its sympathies, I am not of Southern-born parents. My father was born in Ohio, my mother in England. Ever since I have had independent judgments of my own I have been a Federalist. It is this mixture of elements in me—full identification with the South, non-Southern blood and Federalist principles—that makes me hope that a detachment of my affectionate, reminiscent sympathies from my historical judgments is not beyond hoping for."

Current Politics

His chief interest in a work of this sort, of course, was political—"learning the political history of America." It must never be forgotten that, however ardent and successful his work in college, the absorbing concern of his life was government and the problems presented by democratic institutions. He said little outside about all this, but his letters are full of it and no other subject more deeply stirred his emotions. The election of Harrison was a profound disappointment to him.

On March 6 he writes

"Have you heard the Cabinet? Blaine, Secretary of State; Windom (a very respectable man), Treasury; Wanamaker, Postmaster General; the rest, men never heard of till nominated, outside of their own immediate neighborhood—local lawyers of no significance—except Rusk of Minnesota (?), who has been Governor, without distinction, and is now in the newly created department as Secretary of Agriculture. Rather a poor beginning, I take it. What is to be the policy of such an administration? I don't know whether to laugh or to rage."

And 10 days later he expresses himself strongly in a letter to Mrs. Wilson:

"It's singular, considering the judicial frame of mind I try to cultivate, what a partisan I am in politics. Somehow, since this reactionary administration came in, my interest in Washington and governmental affairs there has suffered a decided collapse—temporary, I hope, but none the less real. I feel hostile instead of helpful, as I ought to feel. I'm rather glad to go over for a Saturday and a Sunday, instead of any other days, and spend the time exactly as if I were in any other town, not the capital of the country. Are you ashamed of me? Not, I am afraid, as much as you ought to be! For you are more of a partisan, miss, than I am."

Watches Foreign Affairs

His interest is by no means confined to American politics. His letters and writings of the time bear evidence of the eagerness—even excitement—with which he follows British affairs and, in lesser degree, the politics of France and the continent.

He reads closely the English reviews and weeklies and is constantly comparing the problems of Europe with our own, seeking for wise judgments. He writes to his wife, for example, on February 27, 1889:

"No letter from home as yet today, and so I am driven to fall back for agreeable thoughts upon the good news from London—since you don't see the papers I shall assume that you have not heard it, and give myself the satisfaction of repeating it. Pigott, the fellow who supplies the 'Times' with the Parnell letters upon which that enterprising journal has been basing its charges of crime against the Irish Nationalist party (the charge which the Commission has been trying) has confessed that he forged them (at least the most important and damaging of them) and the 'Times' is thoroughly discredited in the whole matter. Parnell is virtually cleared, and, what is more, it now looks as if the Nationalist cause had received an important impulse forward. Even the 'Standard' (the London New York Tribune) concedes these points and advises the 'Times' to surrender at discretion rather than make a still worse impression on the public mind. I know that you will agree with me that this is good news. The next elections promise to give the Gladstonians a signal triumph. The news has positively excited me."

Very often his speeches, like the address on George Washington delivered in the church at Middletown, April 30, 1889, are made vital by references to current affairs:

"Those of you who have followed the course of events in France and who share with all lovers of liberty the anxiety caused by the present posture of her affairs will know whence my best illustration will be drawn. You know how straight M. Monod has pointed his finger at his country's trouble in what he says in the current (the April) number of the 'Contemporary Review.' 'France,' he says, 'is suffering mainly from moral instability and disease of the imagination, the result of a too sudden rupture with her own traditions.'"

The greatest book of the day on American democracy was, of course, Bryce's "American Commonwealth." Wilson pounced upon it with a kind of passion, characteristically underscored its significant passages, filled it with side notes, in short tore the very vitals out of it and prepared a review for the "Political Science Quarterly"—as good a criticism of the work as was ever written. He compared Bryce with De Tocqueville, tried to get at the real meaning of democracy, commented upon the nature of the leadership in the Free State, and considered the problems that lay just ahead.

Life At Wesleyan

Wilson's life at Wesleyan, as at Bryn Mawr, was one of the utmost happiness. It was extremely simple and every penny that could be saved went into books that were needed in his work. Stockton Axson relates an incident which occurred during the visit of Dr. Thomas Hoyt, of Philadelphia, Mrs. Wilson's rather aristocratic uncle:

"Once when Uncle Tom was visiting us in Middletown Mr. Wilson broke into a soft chuckle while he and I were sitting alone.

"'What are you laughing at?' I asked.

"He replied: 'To think how I blacked Uncle Tom's boots this morning. Passing his bedroom door, I saw that he had put his boots outside, naturally assuming that all self-respecting people keep a man. I knew Bridget wouldn't black them, and Annie couldn't, so there was nothing to do but tackle the job myself.'"

In October, 1889, a third daughter Eleanor Randolph, was born. He wrote to Bridges:

"My big piece of news is in that three weeks ago another daughter was born to us. Both mother and baby are doing and feeling splendidly. There is now 'the baby, the little baby, and the littlest baby of all.'"

Whenever Wilson went away from home he wrote to his wife every day, and he literally counted the days until his return.

"Lecture No. 8 was delivered this morning. The end of this week will see at least 10 off my hands—and I feel almost half way to my deliverance—my return to you."

He was a man, indeed, deeply dependent upon friends, upon sympathy. He could not live without it. He still cherished and rested upon the love of his father. He wrote:

"I received just now—much to my delight, as you may imagine—a four-page letter from dear father; four pages of his best letter writing, his best both for love matter and for expression—and you know how delightful an epistle that means." . . .

Ardent in Friendship

There was never a man who could maintain deeper and more vital human relationships. He could hate, too—but what friends he had! One of those who speaks of him as "one of the most loyal friends I ever had" was the Rev. Dr. Hazen of Middletown. The friendship begun at Middletown continued to the end of Wilson's life. Wilson's letters are full of affection. Years after leaving Middletown he wrote to Dr. Hazen:

"I don't know how many long letters to you I have planned—full of the many things I have thought—we have thought—of you and Mrs. Hazen, our dear friends, as our minds have turned again and again to Middletown and the two years, good to think of, which we spent there." . . .

Here are extracts from two other letters written during the driven years at the White House:

"In these days of strain nothing is quite so sweet to me as the voice of an old friend and the thought that I am being remembered so generously and so affectionately."

And in a pathetic letter written December 21, 1922, during his illness and signed "affectionately yours," he says:

"I treasure your friendship and every evidence of it heartens and helps me. It is by means of such support that a man manages to pass over the hard places in life without disheartenment."

He had a way of putting an indelible impress upon ardent young men—as he did upon Winthrop M. Daniels, who came to see him at Middletown in the spring of 1890 and who was afterwards to join him at Princeton, and years later to be appointed by him a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission. They were lifelong friends. Daniels retains a vivid memory of his first meeting with Wilson:

"The walls of his study were lined to the ceiling with books in orderly array, but the somewhat cramped dimensions of the room and the towering shelves of volumes, only dimly outlined, created an atmosphere of something like severity. During our interview I remember thinking that Mr. Wilson's features—he sat facing the window—were the only clearly distinct thing in the room. . . .

A Colleague's Memories

"I have tried to recall my impressions of Mr. Wilson upon this occasion. . . . The naturalness of his talk and manner would have disarmed all attempts at descriptive analysis, had I ever been capable of such artificial portraiture. His face was long, though I confess that until later caricature exaggerated the length of his lower jaw it had never occurred to me as one of his noticeable facial characteristics. I remember some years later in his study at Princeton to have been impressed by a striking photograph upon the mantelpiece of Mommsen, the German historian. The photograph is well known, and represents the Forscher as an old man with a preternaturally long wisp of thin, gray hair that curves warily along the side of his face below his chin. The eye of Mommsen was the eye of Wilson, searching, significant, penetrating, unforgettable, with an unquestionable gravity, and at times almost protuberant as if by an internal intellectual impulse. His play of facial expression was always dominated by his eye. His features were sensitive and mobile; his lips fine and full, and at times the tip of his nose, especially when he was amused, would tilt slightly downward, out of alignment with the nasal bridge. His countenance was at once arresting, sometimes grimly arresting, but always distinguished.

"Our interview was brief, though he showed no indication of finding tiresome what he must have known were the immature observations of a callow young student."

In spite of the intensity and seriousness of Wilson's nature, in spite of his devotion to his work, he could play, though it usually required a friend to draw him on. He enjoyed tennis at Wesleyan with the younger professors, and occasionally he got away for a real outing with Bridges. What he did on a holiday was told in letters home:

"August 29, 1889—My program yesterday was—Coney Island, including Vanity Fair at one end a capital orchestral concert at the other (Manhattan Beach) end. Coming back in time for the theater, I went to see 'Bootles' Baby,' and was much edified. It's really a very good thing.

"I fancy when I look around at the theaters that they are full of Southern people.

"Bobby wants me to go outside to Baltimore with him (on his way home) and then to return thence by steamer to Boston, on my way home, and I'm half inclined to do it. What do you think?"

"August 30, 1889—Had a delightful day at quiet Sea Bright yesterday—came back sunburned and happy. For today I have no program as yet except to see the professional baseball match this afternoon. Tomorrow I shall probably go outside to Long Branch."

"August 31, 1889—I found your first letter at the P. O. yesterday. I had asked twice before there, and had rec'd the preface and title-page proof, but had not asked for the letter at the right time.

"Yesterday I loafed and went to the Eden Musee (!) in the morning, and in the afternoon went to see my first professional game of baseball. The latter I enjoyed immensely. It was between the two best nines in the country, Boston and New York.

"At night I saw Sol Smith Russell in 'A Poor Relation'—a really capital thing well done."

Tomorrow's installment of "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson" will begin the story of his long connection with Princeton, where he made the reputation which was to lead him to the governorship of New Jersey and presidency of the United States

"Save Lipstick," Ruth's Motto, Will Hears

WILL ROGERS.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 17.—Outside of Notre Dame there is not much to brag about in the papers today.

Kemal Pasha or somebody is making a speech to Turkey that is lasting five days and nights. He must be arguing whether to put prohibition in their platform or not.

Ruth Elder, that dutiful and home-loving wife, says, "Save the lipstick first"—so the plane was lost.

Yours,
WILL.

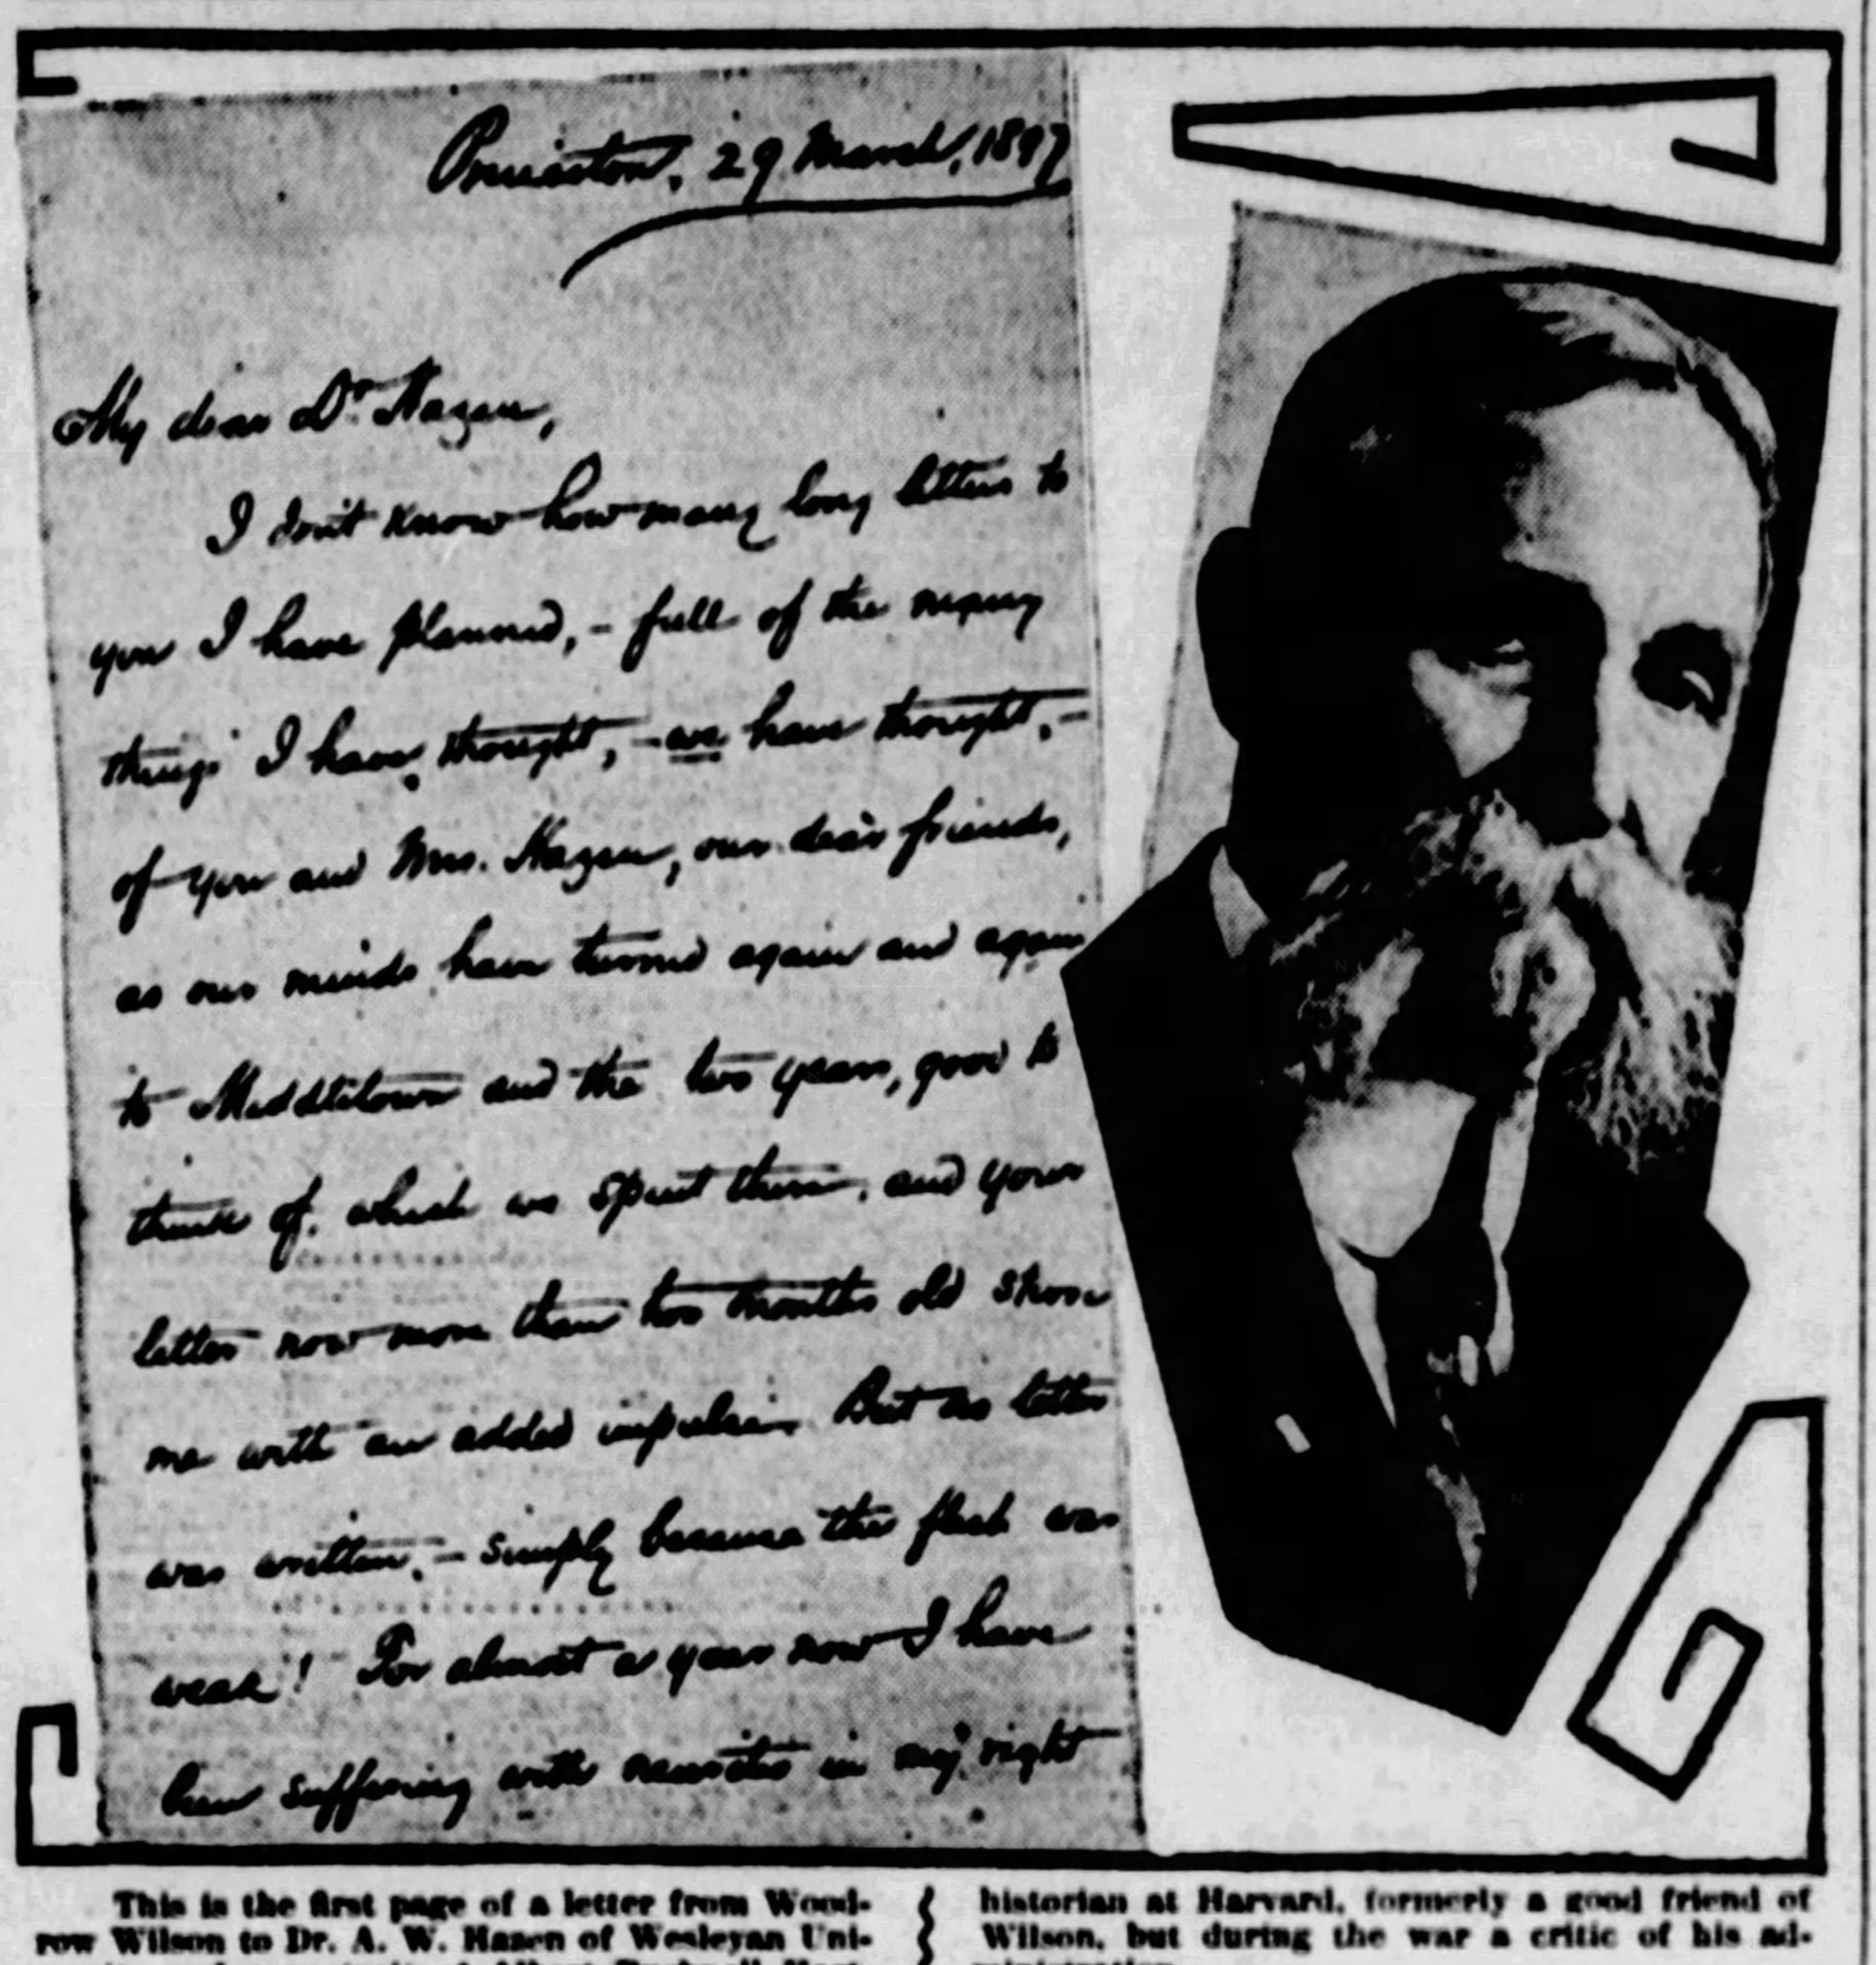
SIGNIFICANT APOLOGY BY NEUROTIC



Princeton, 29 March, 1897

My dear Dr. Hazen,

I don't know how many long letters to you I have planned,—full of the many things I have thought,—we have thought,—of you and Mrs. Hazen, our dear friends, as our minds have turned again and again to Middletown and the two years, good to think of, which we spent there, and your letter now more than two months old stirred me with an added impulse. But no letter was written,—simply because the flesh was weak! For almost a year now I have been suffering with neuritis in my right

This is the first page of a letter from Woodrow Wilson to Dr. A. W. Hazen of Wesleyan University and a portrait of Albert Bushnell Hart, historian at Harvard, formerly a good friend of Wilson, but during the war a critic of his administration.

FISHER TO VISIT COOLIDGE

HARRISBURG, Oct. 17. — Gov. Fisher will be the house guest of President Coolidge at the White House Wednesday when the Governor will be in Washington to present the Gen. George Gordon Meade memorial statue to Washington as Pennsylvania's gift to the city.

The Governor today received the invitation, transmitted through Col. U. S. Grant III, Federal member of the Meade Memorial Commission.

The Governor plans to leave here early Wednesday and go direct to the White House. He and the President will attend the ceremonies together, the Governor making the presentation address, the President the address of acceptance.

DODGE INCOME $7,649,119 SO FAR IN 1927

Dodge Brothers, Inc., reports for nine months ended September 30, 1927, consolidated net income of $7,649,119 after depreciation, interest and federal taxes, equivalent after dividend requirements on $7 preference stock to $1.23 a share earned on outstanding 2,435,019 shares of combined Class A and B common stocks. This compares with net income of $17,979,784, or $5.58 a share on 2,434,563 combined A and B common shares, in first nine months of 1926.

Sales in the first nine months were 163,516 cars and trucks, against 283,842 in the same period of 1926. Dollar sales amounted to $134,144,83. Graham Brothers division, which now produces and sells all trucks, buses and commercial vehicles included in the line, sold a total of 41,607 vehicles during the first nine months.

As of September 30, 1927, cash in bank plus readily marketable securities totaled $19,220,886, accounts receivable were $7,797,615, inventories were $15,896,141, total quick assets $42,914,642 and deferred charges $193,579. Total current liabilities, consisting of accounts payable, dealers' deposits, accrual of federal income taxes, accrued interest on debentures and accrued dividends on preference stock, amounted to $14,960,790.

Earned surplus for the nine months was increased by $3,252,244 to a total earned surplus as of September 30 of $28,823,633 and total surplus of $50,481,852.

DON QUIXOTE OF FLIERS LAUDED BY WALKER

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Charles A. Levine, Don Quixote of of aviation and the first transatlantic passenger, returned today from Europe to receive the acclaim of his fellow townsmen, officially extended by Mayor "Jimmie" Walker.

"No amount of whispering can ever efface the memory that you are a genuine New Yorker and a patriotic American," Mayor Walker said.

"I know how far abroad from truth reports which precede one home sometimes are.

"And I remember one thing about your flight, Mr. Levine, when you stepped forward to take your seat with Clarence Chamberlin, no one was killed in the rush to get that seat ahead of you.

"The people of New York, sir, and don't you let anyone tell you different, are genuinely proud of you for the courageous thing you did to the honor and glory of this city."

Levine replied in one sentence, seemingly almost overcome by the mayor's speech and the applause it had brought forth from those in the aldermanic chamber.

Clarence Chamberlin, pilot of the plane on which Levine was a passenger, was not present at the City Hall ceremonies, but telephoned Levine at his hotel to welcome him back.

HARRIS NOMINATED AS POTTERS' PRESIDENT

At a meeting of the directors of the Western Glass and Pottery Association at the Fort Pitt Hotel John H. Harris was nominated as president for a term of two years to succeed A. Binswanger. SPREADS BALM ON WOUND

MISS MARJORIE OELRICHS

Considerable balm was spread over the wound inflicted by Miss Marjorie Oelrichs, 19, and a society deb of New York, on America's men. The balm-spreading act was put on Miss Oelrich's return to the United States on board the S. S. Majestic when she reiterated that while European men had better manners, they were not as good-looking as Americans. She denied that she had meant to attack American men in a recent magazine article.

"WESTINGHOUSE" ELECTRIC PERCOLATORS, $15 VALUE FOR $10.95—BALCONY

AIRPORT SITE CAUSES MUCH SPECULATION

While President T. P. Gaylord, of the Chamber of Commerce, today was carefully considering the selection of the 10 men to be named on the chamber's airport committee, speculation was city-wide on the probable site to be selected as Pittsburgh's great new municipal airport.

A. L. Humphrey, president of Westinghouse Air Brake; William L. Munro, president, American Window Glass Company, and A. E. Braun, president, Farmers Deposit National Bank, who composed the committee recommending the selection of a new site other than Rodgers Field, are "almost certain to be members of the new committee," Mr. Gaylord said. He added that he would not make a final selection of additional members until he could confer with these gentlemen.

Further than that Pittsburg's airport will not be excelled by any in the country, there was no indication today of what location finally would be recommended to city and county officials.

In some quarters it was felt that great areas adjacent to the downtown section, just outside the Golden Triangle, should be purchased, buildings razed and the ground leveled off. Advocates of this plan held that regardless of developments, the land would still be there and its increased value equivalent to any cost of development.

Others felt that by going out of the downtown area to Mt. Washington, or to the less densely populated area on the North Side in the vicinity of the Sixteenth Street Bridge, out to Herron Hill, or in the Mt. Lebanon section and building, if necessary, an automobile speedway, a location as close to the city could be obtained at a cost much less.

Robert E. Dake, president of the Aero Club of Pittsburgh, has already enthusiastically indorsed the project and pledged the full co-operation of the club.

Capt. T. S. Voss, commandant of Rodgers Field, has proffered the use of Government planes at Rodgers Field to aid the experts in selecting the proper site.

"Does wonders for chafed itching skin"

"My doctor told me about it and if I couldn't get another jar I wouldn't give this one up for anything."

That is how many people regard Resinol Ointment. It is specially recommended for eczema and other itching skin toubles, but it is also excellent as a general household remedy for burns, scalds, chafings, cold sores, pimples, boils, insect bites, etc. Always ask for

Hemorrhoids Disappear

All Pile Misery Banished Without Cutting or Salves

External treatments seldom banish Piles for the very good reason that the cause is inside—bad circulation in affected parts, veins are flabby and bowel walls weakened.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send fresh, healthy blood to the raw, sensitive membranes. Internal treatment is one safe method. Ointments and other external treatments can't give lasting relief.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and it has proven successful in thousands of cases—so successful that now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists under a money back guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at May Drug Co., who will promptly refund the purchase price if you are dissatisfied.

All the New Colors

*Newgrey Moscova Araby
Moonlight Sandor Rubina
Newtan Volga Greywing
Corona Black Sailor Blue*

Women who attend this great sale will talk about it for weeks afterward. The values are positively sensational.

On account of the recent warm weather, we were fortunate in getting greater values than we have got in years. After our tremendous preparation and your comparison you will agree that you could ordinarily never buy coats like these for $29.75 at the beginning of the season.

This sale will cause a real commotion. It can't avoid doing so when Coats of such high quality are offered at only $29.75.

You will enthuse over this greatest of all coat offerings. Who wouldn't! The fine furs—the new styles — the wanted smooth materials—the richest colors of the season—it took them all before we were satisfied with the selection.

Sally's Shoulders

ENGROSSING
DRAMATIC

By BEATRICE BURTON

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

SALLY JEROME is the mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who does not live with her mother. MRS. JEROME enjoys poor health, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work afternoons. TED SLOAN is in love with her and wants her to marry him. But the only man who interests Sally is JOHN NYE, for whom her sister, MILLIE, works. Nye is infatuated with Millie, who prefers a bond salesman named DAVIDSON to him. Davidson tires of Millie and worries Sally with his attentions. Mabel, working for Nye while a nurse-maid looks after the baby, laughs at Millie's story about John Nye "getting fresh" with her. One night Nye comes to the inn, sees Sally dance, and shows her how disgusted he is at her "shimmying" for a roadhouse crowd. It comes to Sally, in a flash, that the quaint little inn has become a roadhouse. She and Aunt Em let the jazz band go, stop the dancing, and the business begins to fall off at once. One night some bicycle policemen stop in, and Sally is dreadfully afraid that some of their guests may have liquor at their tables.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

BUT her face was blank, as she bent over the two big frying pans that sizzled noisily. It was clear that she had not heard the footsteps on the stairs.

"Are those two men gone yet?" she asked Sally after four or five minutes. Her voice still shook with righteous anger.

Sally said she would go and find out. She reached the hall in time to meet the two men who had just come downstairs and were on their way to the front door that stood open to the balmy fall night.

"Well, did you find what you were looking for?" she asked them brightly, and they both shook their heads with a kind of sheepishness.

They went out. The sound of their chugging motorcycles died away on the soft, still air.

Sally stood in the doorway, listening to the faint sound, and then to the chirp of the crickets in the grass near the porch. She felt disgraced, somehow. Terribly disgraced. . . . To think of the house being searched by the police! It was too degrading.

"As if we had a still, or were bootleggers or worse!" she said to herself, and waves of shame went over her again and again.

Back in the hot kitchen Aunt Em was still frying chicken. She did not look up when Sally came into the room with a large tray of soiled dishes, and Sally did not look at her.

All evening long they avoided each other's eyes, and they seldom spoke. Both of them were sunk in their own thoughts, and their solemn, drawn faces showed how dark those thoughts were.

At 10 o'clock, when the dining room was empty, and the dishes were done, and Hilda was putting them neatly on the cupboard shelves, Aunt Em went out to the front porch and called Sally to follow her.

When Sally went out she was sitting on the top steps with her hands locked around her knees, staring out into the darkness.

"Sit down," she said, in a muffled voice, and Sally, dropping down beside her, saw that she was crying.

"This is just the last b-b-blow!" she said in a choked and angry voice. When Aunt Em cried, she did not do it in a sobbing, crushed sort of way, but angrily, defiantly, furiously.

"To have my house raided!" she cried, wiping her eyes. "This is the end! I'll close the place up tomorrow!" She dabbed at her eyes with her handkerchief. It was an angry, quick movement.

"Was it as bad as all that?" asked Sally, who always thought of a raid on a roadhouse as being a very exciting affair, with bottles being smashed and people being rushed off to jail in the Black Maria.

"As bad as all what?" asked Aunt Emily, shortly. "It couldn't have been worse, could it? Police walking right into my dining room, among my guests! You don't think I'm going to keep on in business here after a disgrace like that, do you?"

Sally saw then that she felt exactly as she, herself, felt—that both of them had been hopelessly besmirched and deeply disgraced by the visit of the two policemen, and the search of the house.

"No, I'm going to give it all up—tomorrow," Aunt Em said again, and there was firm intent in her tones.

She went upstairs to bed.

Sally was still sitting on the top step, watching the clouds sail across the red autumn moon when Ted Sloan's little car came tearing up the driveway.

She knew it was Ted's car the instant she saw it. For one of its hood lights was green and the other was yellow, and besides that, it had a peculiar wheeze and rattle of its own. It was like Ted—fast and cheap and showy. But Sally had never thought of that.

It stopped before the steps, and Ted got out. Instantly Sally was on her feet. She did not intend to sit out there in the romantic moonlight, with Theodore Sloan at this lonely hour of the night! Not by any means!

"I was just going in. It's cold out here," she said to him after he murmured something about his "always turning up like a bad penny."

They went into the old-fashioned sitting room, where the glow from the wood fire shone on the old polished mahogany furniture, on the Tobey jugs and Bristol glass jars on the old French desk. The warmth of the room brought out the heavy sweetness of the autumn roses in a bowl on the mantel-piece.

"Nice here," said Ted, seating himself on the wide, old-fashioned sofa that faced the fire. "Homey, isn't it?"

And as if the coziness brought a certain thought into his head, he added: "I'd like a home of my own—like this."

"Like this?" echoed the matter-of-fact Sally. "Do you realize what you'd have to pay for a place like this if you were to buy one nowadays? More money than you'd earn in 10 years, Ted Sloan!"

"Yes, but with you and me both earning money—" He shot a keen look at her that was full of longing in spite of its sharpness.

"I'm sorry, Sally, for the things I've said to you lately," he said, and took one of her small work-roughened hands between his own. "Why won't you be the way you used to be? We used to plan to get married and work—"

"We never did!" replied Sally, drawing her hands away from him and sitting up very straight in the corner of the brocaded couch. "It was all YOUR idea—that you'd marry me and give me two jobs instead of one! No thanks! When I get married I expect to work hard at my own job of being a wife and raising a family—and I expect a man who'll see things the way I do. Aren't you ashamed to ask me to marry you and help earn the living?"

'A lot of wives do these days," he said, dull red creeping up under his freckled skin. "Times have changed."

"Well, I haven't!" answered Sally, passionately. "I still want to be the old-fashioned kind of woman who makes pies, scrubs floors on her knees, and goes to market pushing a baby carriage. That is, I'd rather be that kind of woman if I ever married. But I'm not going to marry! You go on home, Ted, and leave us old maids alone."

"Old maid!" repeated Ted, his eyes filled with Sally's young bloom, her freshness, her sweetness that was not for him. "Old maid!"

CHAPTER LXIII.

"TED asked me to marry him—again, last night," Sally told Aunt Em the next morning as they sat at breakfast.

The little white breakfast room was gay and cheerful with clear autumn sunlight, the percolator bubbled in the middle of the table, and the fragrant wood fire crackled merrily in the grate.

Sally, herself, in a warm wool dressing gown that exactly matched the scarlet geraniums in the windows, looked as bright as the morning.

Only Aunt Em was gloomy and blue. Her face was grim as she lifted it from the newspaper she was reading.

"Oh, he did, did he? Well, I hope you told him to run around the block," she said tartly.

Then she bent her eyes once more to the paper in her hand. "Here's a news item about Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt," she said. "She's bought the old General Putnam Inn at Brooklyn, Conn., and is going to run it. . . . You see what I told you, Sally. Better women and finer ladies than I have taken to running inns these days. Look at Alice Foote MacDougal, too, in New York! They say she's made a million dollars out of her tea-rooms—" She glanced up at the walls of her own house, and for once her eyes were almost dreamy.

"I have a brand new idea for this place," she said.

Sally could tell, from the look on her face, that she was brimful of another scheme. But she did not question her. The only way to get things out of Aunt Em was to let her take her own good time about telling them.

"Here's the postman," she said, and flew to get the letters that he dropped into the mailbox on the front porch.

There were two of them. They were both for her, and they were post-marked "Bermuda."

The first of them was from Mrs. Jerome. Sally read it aloud.

"Dear Sally," Mrs. Jerome had written. "I know I have not written to you for a long time, but I've been so busy with your poor papa, who really seems to be getting better under my loving and tender care. We sit under the trees all day long, with nothing to do but talk or read—"

"I'll bet that makes a hit with your mother!" snapped Aunt Em, bitterly. "Just sitting around doing nothing but collecting fat all day long!"

Sally went on reading: "We certainly are enjoying it here, but we could use a little more money, so if you can coax any out of your Aunt Em try to do it, please."

"Fine chance!" snorted Aunt Em, her eyes flashing.

Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer

By John Held, Jr.

MARGY, IT SEEMS LIKE AN AGE SINCE I'VE HAD YOU ALL ALONE!
LATELY, EVERY TIME I'VE WANTED TO TALK TO YOU THERE'S A GANG AROUND!
ALL RIGHT ARAB, YOU CAN HAVE ME ALL TO YOUR SELF THIS EVENING, I THINK YOU RATE IT!
ALL ALONE!

"ACtually, my dear, you've never KNOWN anything so POSitively perVERted as the way this odd soul ARab acted at this HOUSE party that he and I and NOIsy were on together at the McTAVish's, because I mean he HONestly kept purSUing me the entire TIME and his exPRESsion SIMply asSASinated me because, my dear, he ALways looked so sort of AWfully luGUBrious whenever any of these OTher awfully sweet boys were round, do you know what I mean? REALly, my dear, I NEARly had hysTERics about it because ONE night it was honestly too perfectly SCREAMing because ARab sort of seQUEStered me on the STAIRS and began sort of awfully EARnestly imPRESsing on me how he hadn't been able to see me aLONE for Ages, you see, but I mean just as he sort of began to conGRATulate himself on having been terribly cagey about planning this little tete-a-tete effect with me, WHO should arrive but about 'STEEN other terribly attractive men—can you BEAR it? I mean I was comPLETEly surROUNDed, no less, but I mean it was REALly awfully sort of emBARrassing because HEAPS of OTher girls were sort of traipsing VAGUEly round aLONE while these odd souls simply SAT, sort of, and talked to ME, but anyways I was SIMply conVULSED because ARab was terribly SUNK about it and all, do you know what I mean?"

Love's Embers

By Adele Garrison

Giant Thrusts Himself Upon a Company

I HAD scored as far as Dicky was concerned. I saw that even before I had finished my apparently guileless little assurance to Eleanor Lincoln that I would urge Philip Veritzen to come down to the east end of the island, and then would engineer a meeting for her with the famous theatrical producer. My husband was not able to avoid contracting his brows in a sudden black frown, even though a second later his face apparently was devoid of any emotion save pleased assent to what I was saying. But I had seen that sudden anger, and I thrilled with the gratified malice of an artistic bit of revenge. For I was convinced by now that Dicky's offer to Miss Lincoln of my services as an intermediary between her ambitions and Philip Veritzen's well-known determination to interview no theatrical aspirants, was a gratuitous slap at me, a malicious whimsy, inspired by his dislike of Mr. Veritzen, and his rancor at me on account of my work with the great theatrical producer.

But there was no consciousness of any tension in Eleanor Lincoln's rejoinder to my proposition.

"That will be most—wonderful," she said enthusiastically. "How can I ever thank you? Will it be very long before he comes down?"

"That, I cannot tell you," I said, smiling. "Mr. Veritzen is a very busy man and rather an erratic one. But I imagine it will not be very long, perhaps a week or two. You are going to be here some time, are you not?"

"All summer," she returned, and with the words she appeared to recollect that she was a hostess, and that she had spent almost every moment of our call in endeavoring to secure our good offices for the furtherance of her own aims.

"Do you know this place?" she said. "It's rather pretty, for its kind."

There was a note of contemptuous disparagement in her tone, which would have jarred me if I had not realized that she was herself unconscious of it. I stored away one mental note concerning the girl. Whoever she was, whatever the solution of the apparent mystery surrounding her advent into our neighborhood, she was accustomed to living upon a different scale and in more pretentious surroundings than those in which she now found herself.

"I know it only from seeing it from the road," I returned. "It has been neglected for years. I understand that it was once very beautiful."

"Really? You amaze me," she returned, and then with an apparent sudden thought added. "Would you like to stroll through the grounds?"

"Very much, indeed," I replied, and rose with her. With punctilious courtesy, she kept close to me and Dicky ranged himself upon her other side, leaving Noel and Mary to follow behind us, an arrangement which I fancied our imperious young hostess did not relish, but which, of course, she was powerless to change for the moment.

We sauntered around the veranda which ran almost around the house, until we came to a flight of steps leading down into what once had been a sunken garden, and in which there were still brave old-fashioned hardy plants and rose bushes, giving mute evidence of the beauty which once had been there.

I caught my breath as I saw what lay beyond the garden, and said quietly:

"May we not stand here a second. This is exquisite."

She shrugged her shoulders ever so slightly, and I saw that the view which so filled me with admiration, held little attraction for her. But my eyes traveled over the sweep of dark evergreens extending from the corner of the house to the edge of a tiny lake, then curving around it so that the sparkling water and the rare lilies in bloom upon its surface were framed in dark green.

It was but for an instant that I had the opportuniy to revel in the beauty of the picture before me. Then obscuring it like a dark formless shadow, there came between us and the lake, the figure of the red-bearded and red-haired giant whom I had seen in our own yard the day before, with his even more repulsive companion and the savage dog which had sprung at Jerry Ticer.

Steak With Onions

Broil the steak in the usual way. Take three Spanish onions and slice them very thin. Then put into a frying pan with a heaping tablespoonful of butter. Cover, and when melted down add a tablespoonful of sugar, pepper and salt. Uncover and stir until a delicate brown and dried down somewhat. Turn around the steak and garnish with parsley.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

ECZEMA ITCHED AND BURNED

On Face, Scalp and Limbs. Healed by Cuticura.

"My little son at fifteen months broke out with eczema. It looked like hives at first, but later broke out in water blisters and affected his face, scalp, arms and limbs. It itched and burned so badly that he could not sleep day or night without crying out every few minutes, and his limbs had to be bandaged. We had to hold his hands to keep him from scratching.

"A friend advised Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I purchased some, and in four months he was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Gilbert Lindsey, Hallstead, Pa. April 26, 1927.

"Shysters, Beware," Brandon Warns

"Lawyers who indulge in corrupt solicitation will be barred from Morals Court," Magistrated A, D, Brandon promised today in open court, after he had stopped two attorneys from seeking clients among the spectators.

"It's larceny," Brandon declared, "and I'll ask the bar association to help me stop these shysters. I don't object to their representing gamblers and prostitutes, but in these family quarrels they're not needed—and it costs the unfortunate husband or wife needed money."

ROAD BUREAU'S PURSE FLAT

The available funds for the Bureau of Highways and Sewers have been exhausted, Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang informed Council today. If the employes of the bureau are to be continued at work until December 31 the additional amount needed will be $143,000. Should the men be put on half time $71,500 will be needed. The Director told Council that a protracted spell of bad weather, stopping work, would reduce the amount needed. He asked a conference on the subject.

REARRESTED IN VOTE MURDER

Paddy Coangelio, 37, of 22 Clay way, arrested in connection with a murder, and promptly released by court because he was serving as an election officer when seized, was rearrested today by Detective Lieutenant David Corbett in connection with the murder of George Faber, 22, 1321 Fayette street.

Faber died September 20, several days after he had been shot in an election riot at Penn avenue and Twenty-third street.

CARRICK WANTS SERVICE

The Twenty-ninth Ward, formerly Carrick, presented a series of demands upon Council today. Better lights on Brownsville avenue, $11,500 for the improvement of the Carrick Park athletic field, a number of street improvements and the installation of a fire alarm system in the ward are asked in a letter sent in by the Carrick Board of Trade.

TENNIS ASSOCIATION SEEKS MORE COURTS

A request for a conference to discuss the needs for more and better tennis courts in the parks was received today by Council from John J. Howe, president of the Pittsburgh Parks Tennis Association. Council also received an ordinance creating the position of supervisor for Frick Park at a salary of $3,000 a year.

DORMONT LAWYER NEW AIDE OF U. S. ATTORNEY

Attorney Winfield S. Walsh of Dormont, with offices in the Union Trust Company Building, today was sworn in as a special assistant to the United States Attorney General and assigned as aid to United States Attorney John D. Meyer. Mr. Walsh will specialize in suits brought under the national prohibition law.

SAYS SCHOOL BOARD SHY ON TAX COSTS

The Board of Education has not been paying its proper share of the cost of collecting school taxes, City Treasurer Wallace Borland told Council today. The board has been paying $31,252.56 as its share. Borland said that it should pay $54,828 and reported that he had been unable to adjust the matter.

Death Roll

Frank L. Brown.

Frank L. Brown, 50, first vice president of the Columbia Steel and Shafting Company of Carnegie and treasurer of the Edgar T. Ward's Sons Company, died Friday in Philadelphia. He resided at the Ruskin apartments. He came of a family known as pioneers in the steel industry in this district, his grandfather having been one of the founders of the Brown-Bonnell Iron Company, which later became one of the units of the Republic Iron and Steel Company of Youngstown, O. Mr. Brown, who had been connected with the Brown-Bonnell organization, continued with the company under the new management until 1913, when he became associated with the Columbia Steel and Shafting Company. He had been an officer and director of the company since that time. Mr. Brown leaves his widow, Mrs. Geraldine Brown, and a brother, William O. Brown, of Youngstown, O.

Mrs. Mary A. Lanahan.

Mrs. Mary A. Lanahan, 82, widow of James K. Lanahan, known for her lifelong work in behalf of Pittsburgh orphans, died Saturday in her home in the Bellefield dwellings. She was born May 3, 1845, and was educated at old Seton Hill Academy, Cincinnati, O. In 1867 she was married with Mr. Lanahan. Her charitable works included providing the Christmas dinner for the children of St. Paul's Orphan Asylum for more than 25 years, and support of the orphans' tea party, a charitable affair held for many years in Lafayette Hall. Mrs. Lanahan was a member of St. Paul's Cathedral. She leaves two sons, Frank J. and J. Stevenson Lanahan, and a daughter, Mrs. Florence Phelan, of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. James McGregor.

Mrs. James McGregor, 94, widow of Maj. James McGregor, died Friday at her home, 262 South Highland avenue. She was a member of Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. George L. Farrell.

Mrs. Clemens Bickert.

Mrs. Albertina Bickert, wife of Clemens Bickert, of 1214 East street, died Saturday at St. John's Hospital. She was a member of Trinity Lutheran Church. She leaves, besides her husband, a daughter, Mrs. Edith Buescher.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Smith.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Smith, 85, widow of Matthew Smith, died Sunday in the Home for Aged Protestant Women, Wilkinsburg. She was born in Pittsburgh. She leaves a son, Frank H. Smith, of Arcadia, Cal., and a daughter, Mrs. Joseph Bowlby, of Weehaken, N. J.

The Rev. D. D. Kiehl.

The Rev. DeWalt D. Kiehl, 59, pastor of Chartiers Presbyterian Church, died suddenly Saturday at his home near Canonsburg. Born at Scenery Hill, Pa., he was educated at the Southwestern State Normal School, Waynesburg College and the Cumberland Presbyterian Seminary, and had been pastor of Chartiers Church for five years. He leaves his widow and a son, George W. Kiehl.

John W. Magill.

John W. Magill, of 290 Le Moyne avenue, Mt. Lebanon, died at his home Sunday morning. He was a member of the John A. Brashear Lodge F. and A. M., and the Almas Club of Dormont. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Ethel Rogers Magill, and a son, John W. Magill, Jr.

DRY AGENTS SEIZE STILL AT OVERBROOK

Federal prohibition agents last night raided a house at 409 Main street, Overbrook, and reported seizing a 100-gallon still, 120 gallons of moonshine whisky, 40 barrels of mash, 300 pounds of corn sugar and an automobile. Emilio Bersani, 42, was arrested in connection with the raid.

Dies Watching Son

SPOKANE, Wash., Oct. 17.—Capt. Fritz Baier of Great Falls, Mont., left guard on the Gonzaga University football team, played through a large part of the game with Washington State College here Saturday, ignorant of the fact that his mother, a spectator in the grandstand, had dropped dead of excitement early in the contest.

Havey Boyle.

AFTER the splendid showing of Washington and Jefferson against Carnegie Tech only the most captious could find fault with the smooth-working eleven welded by Coach Andy Kerr. Against Tech it appeared to be a team with better offensive power than defensive ability. Plucky Carnegie Tech, sadly outclassed, nevertheless had a capacity to frustrate the defensive tactics of the Presidents. Before Andy Kerr brings his Red and Black eleven to the Pitt Stadium to play the Panthers the Presidents must develop a better genius for stopping an attack.

ASIDE from Bill Amos, who galloped gallantly through the Tech eleven on behalf of the Presidents, the Washington and Jefferson player who stood out in the conflict was Carl Aschman, a lithe, light center, who has a talent for tackling and who has a knack for fathoming enemy trickery. He was reminiscent of a great line of centers at Pitt, including the great Peck, Stein, and latterly Marsh Johnson. Aschman is hardly as gifted as this dynasty of Pitt centers, but he showed earmarks of greatness in the game against the Tartans. When the Presidents come here to play Pitt keep one eye open for Aschman who moves, cajoles, and exhorts his comrades, when he is not smearing a play.

WASH-JEFF continues the huddle system of calling signals, a system not wholly popular, but so long as it wins games little can be said, effectively, against it. It seems to take a little zest out of the game, but this may be only a prejudice. Pitt used it last year, but is managing to get along without it this season.

IT MAY be that the rules would not allow it, but this observer, after having paid close attention to Mr. Pauly in the Wash-Jeff line would like to see an experiment. Mr. Pauly's dimensions are 267 pounds by six feet and some inches, giving the general effect of a mighty barrel. It occurred to us that Andy Kerr might start an innovation in collegiate football circles by having Mr. Pauly stretch on the ground, east and west, instead of north and south, so to speak. That is to say, instead of having the gigantic Pauly face his enemy guard, it might be well to have him lie parallel with the opposing line.

STRETCHED end to end in this manner, Mr. Pauly could take care of just three times the territory alotted to him now. This would relieve that whole side of a tackle and end who could be transferred to the other side. The secondary defensemen could take care of any foeman who instead of vainly trying to crawl over the prostrate Pauly would try to run around either of Pauly's ends. There must be some flaw in this, because Andy Kerr is overlooking nothing that sounds so simple as this, but observing Mr. Pauly's 267 pounds and his six feet and more of height the temptation was to devise some system where his great bulk could be better made use of.

WHETHER it is feasible to play Mr. Pauly parallel to the enemy line, instead of at right angles, is something for a better engineer than this writer to work out, but it certainly can't do any harm for Andy Kerr to start a little surveying to see if this new idea is not workable. Mr. Pauly, himself, might object a little to the scheme, yet it might work out better than the present scheme which causes Mr. Pauly to get up and down quite laboriously after every down. If the scheme suggested worked out it might be possible to simply roll Mr. Pauly from one place to another, thus obviating the necessity of his great bulk rising and falling so often.

A REFEREE of an independent football team comes in as these lines are written. His head is swathed in great bandages, which hide from view a dent made by an enthusiastic gridiron player who slugged him after an argument during a game. Now this is not surprising—this bandaged referee—but what is surprising is that anyone is venturesome enough to volunteer for such a task.

IN ALL games there is the same antipathy to the robes of authority. In baseball it is the umpire; in football, the referee; in boxing, the judges and referee. Always, the officials are condemned, and this against the fact that as a general rule no participant in any of the sports attempts to be fairer and more honest than these officials who daily and nightly bring rounds of abuse.

WE ARE getting to be a little bit of a propagandist for all officials. This comes from knowing how anxious they are to please a clientele that will not be entirely pleased. Yet to those who have no partisan feelings to satisfy in baseball, football, boxing, or what have you, we recommend careful inquiry to the old cry of bad officiating.

Goad Mandell And Walker

TOLEDO, Oct., 17.—(AP.)—The lightweight title of Sammy Mandell and the middleweight crown of Mickey Walker are to receive the serious consideration of the National Boxing Association members, now in session.

The members of the Association, made up of representatives of 24 states where boxing is legalized, are understood to feel that Mandell has shown apparent reluctance in defending his title since he won it from Rocky Kansas in Chicago a year ago last July.

The middleweight championship situation has been brought to the Association's attention through protest by Walk Miller, manager of Tiger Flowers, the former titleholder. Miller has contended that Jack Kearns, manager of Walker, failed to carry out a contract which provided that Walker meet Flowers within 90 days should the Georgia Deacon lose his championship in their fight here last April.

CHEATED, MILLER SAYS

Miller has insisted that Kearns refused to carry out the terms of the contract and for that reason he will ask the association to have Walker's title taken from him and restored to Flowers, or that Walker be compelled to fight Flowers again.

There has been little comment by the association members on the middleweight situation, but there was a feeling among the commissioners today that Mandell has not been active enough in defending his lightweight crown. Mandell has signed to defend his title in Chicago, November 14, and if a logical contender is chosen to meet him the National Association considers that Billy Wallace, the Cleveland lightweight; Sid Terris and Louis (Kid) Kaplan stand out as challengers.

Thomas E. Donohue of New London, Conn., boxing commissioner of that state and acting head of the association, is a candidate for the presidency. Paul Prehn, a member of the Illinois State Commission, also is a candidate.

The repeal of the Federal law prohibiting the interstate transportation of fight films was expected to receive unanimous approval. Members of the association said that fight fans in their own states should be privileged to witness the showing of pictures of battles fought in other states, especially where boxing is legalized.

Because of the refusal of the New York State Athletic Commission to join the national association, Donohue and his associates said the association will continue to operate independently, without regard to the New York rulings.

SHOTS and PASSES

HIS career as a varsity basketball player at Duquesne University completed, Johnny Serbin, one of the outstanding forwards in the Tristate Conference, will be back with the Enoch Rauh club this winter.

Johnny learned the fine points of the popular winter indoor sport as a member of the Rauhs and he should add considerable strength to that club this season.

The Rauhs this season will flash a new set of forwards, both Nate Lippe and Lou Alman having decided to retire as active players.

Should Buckets Sandomire be obtained, the former Coffey Club star and Serbin will hold down the forward positions.

EDDIE LOSMAN, former star of the Sumer Somerman club and now a student at Duquesne University, is expected to win a regular berth at center on the Bluff varsity this winter.

Losman stood out with the best players enrolled in the Pittsburgh and Ohio Valley League last winter, his general conduct on the floor stamping him as one of the most promising stars in this vicinity.

Possessing the necessary height that goes with the making of an ideal center, Losman should have no difficulty making the Duke squad this winter.

SEVERAL prominent athletes who shown in local independent circles last winter have entered college this fall and will be candidates for regular berths on freshman and varsity quintets hereabouts.

Sammy Pratt and Eddie Losman of the Somermans are enrolled at Duquesne; Wilbur Mervis of the Morry Cadets likewise is at Duquesne; Red Sapira of the Somermans has entered the University of Pittsburgh, while the same university has in its student body Zukovich of the Morry Cadets.

Pratt, besides ranking as one of the most promising floor stars in the Greater Pittsburgh district, is starring for the Dukes on the gridiron, the former Somerman regular being one of the terminals on Coach Layden's eleven.

FOUR members of last year's Allegheny County League, namely the Champion Duquesne Finks-Lafayettes, the Enoch Rauh Club, the McKeesport Cyclers and the Goose Goslins, have signified their intention of retaining franchises in that popular circuit this winter.

The Goldensons and the Schwartz Valley Club of Munhall have decided to remain out, while nothing definite has been heard from the management of the St. Joseph Lyceum quintet. Butler, Braddock and Jeannette are eager to obtain berths in the Allegheny County League, according to J. J. Freund, Jr., who is in charge of the reorganization plans. Teams desiring to make application for a berth are requested to call him at Lafayette 4297.

BRITTON-MARTINEZ FIGHT

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—(UP.)—Forty-two-year-old Jack Britton, former world's welterweight champion, staging a comeback will meet Hilario Martinez, sensational Spanish youngster, in a 10-round bout at the new Broadway Arena, Brooklyn, tonight.

Booth in Second Place Among Grid Scorers

OUR own Dickie Booth, sensational plunging fullback of the Golden Panthers of Pitt, is steadily overhauling his rivals for high scoring honors in the East, and today stands second in the list of leading point getters with a mark of 57, scored on eight touchdowns and nine points after touchdown.

Myles Lane's phenomenal scoring total rose to 87 points when the Dartmouth halfback made 24 points single handed against Temple Saturday. Lane now overtops Booth by 30 points, and at this early stage in the season is only 33 points short of the best mark made in the entire season of 1926, when Wilson of Lafayette finished at the top last year with 120 points. Lane was fourth with 51.

Connor of New York University clings to third and Roepke of Penn State rose to fourth.

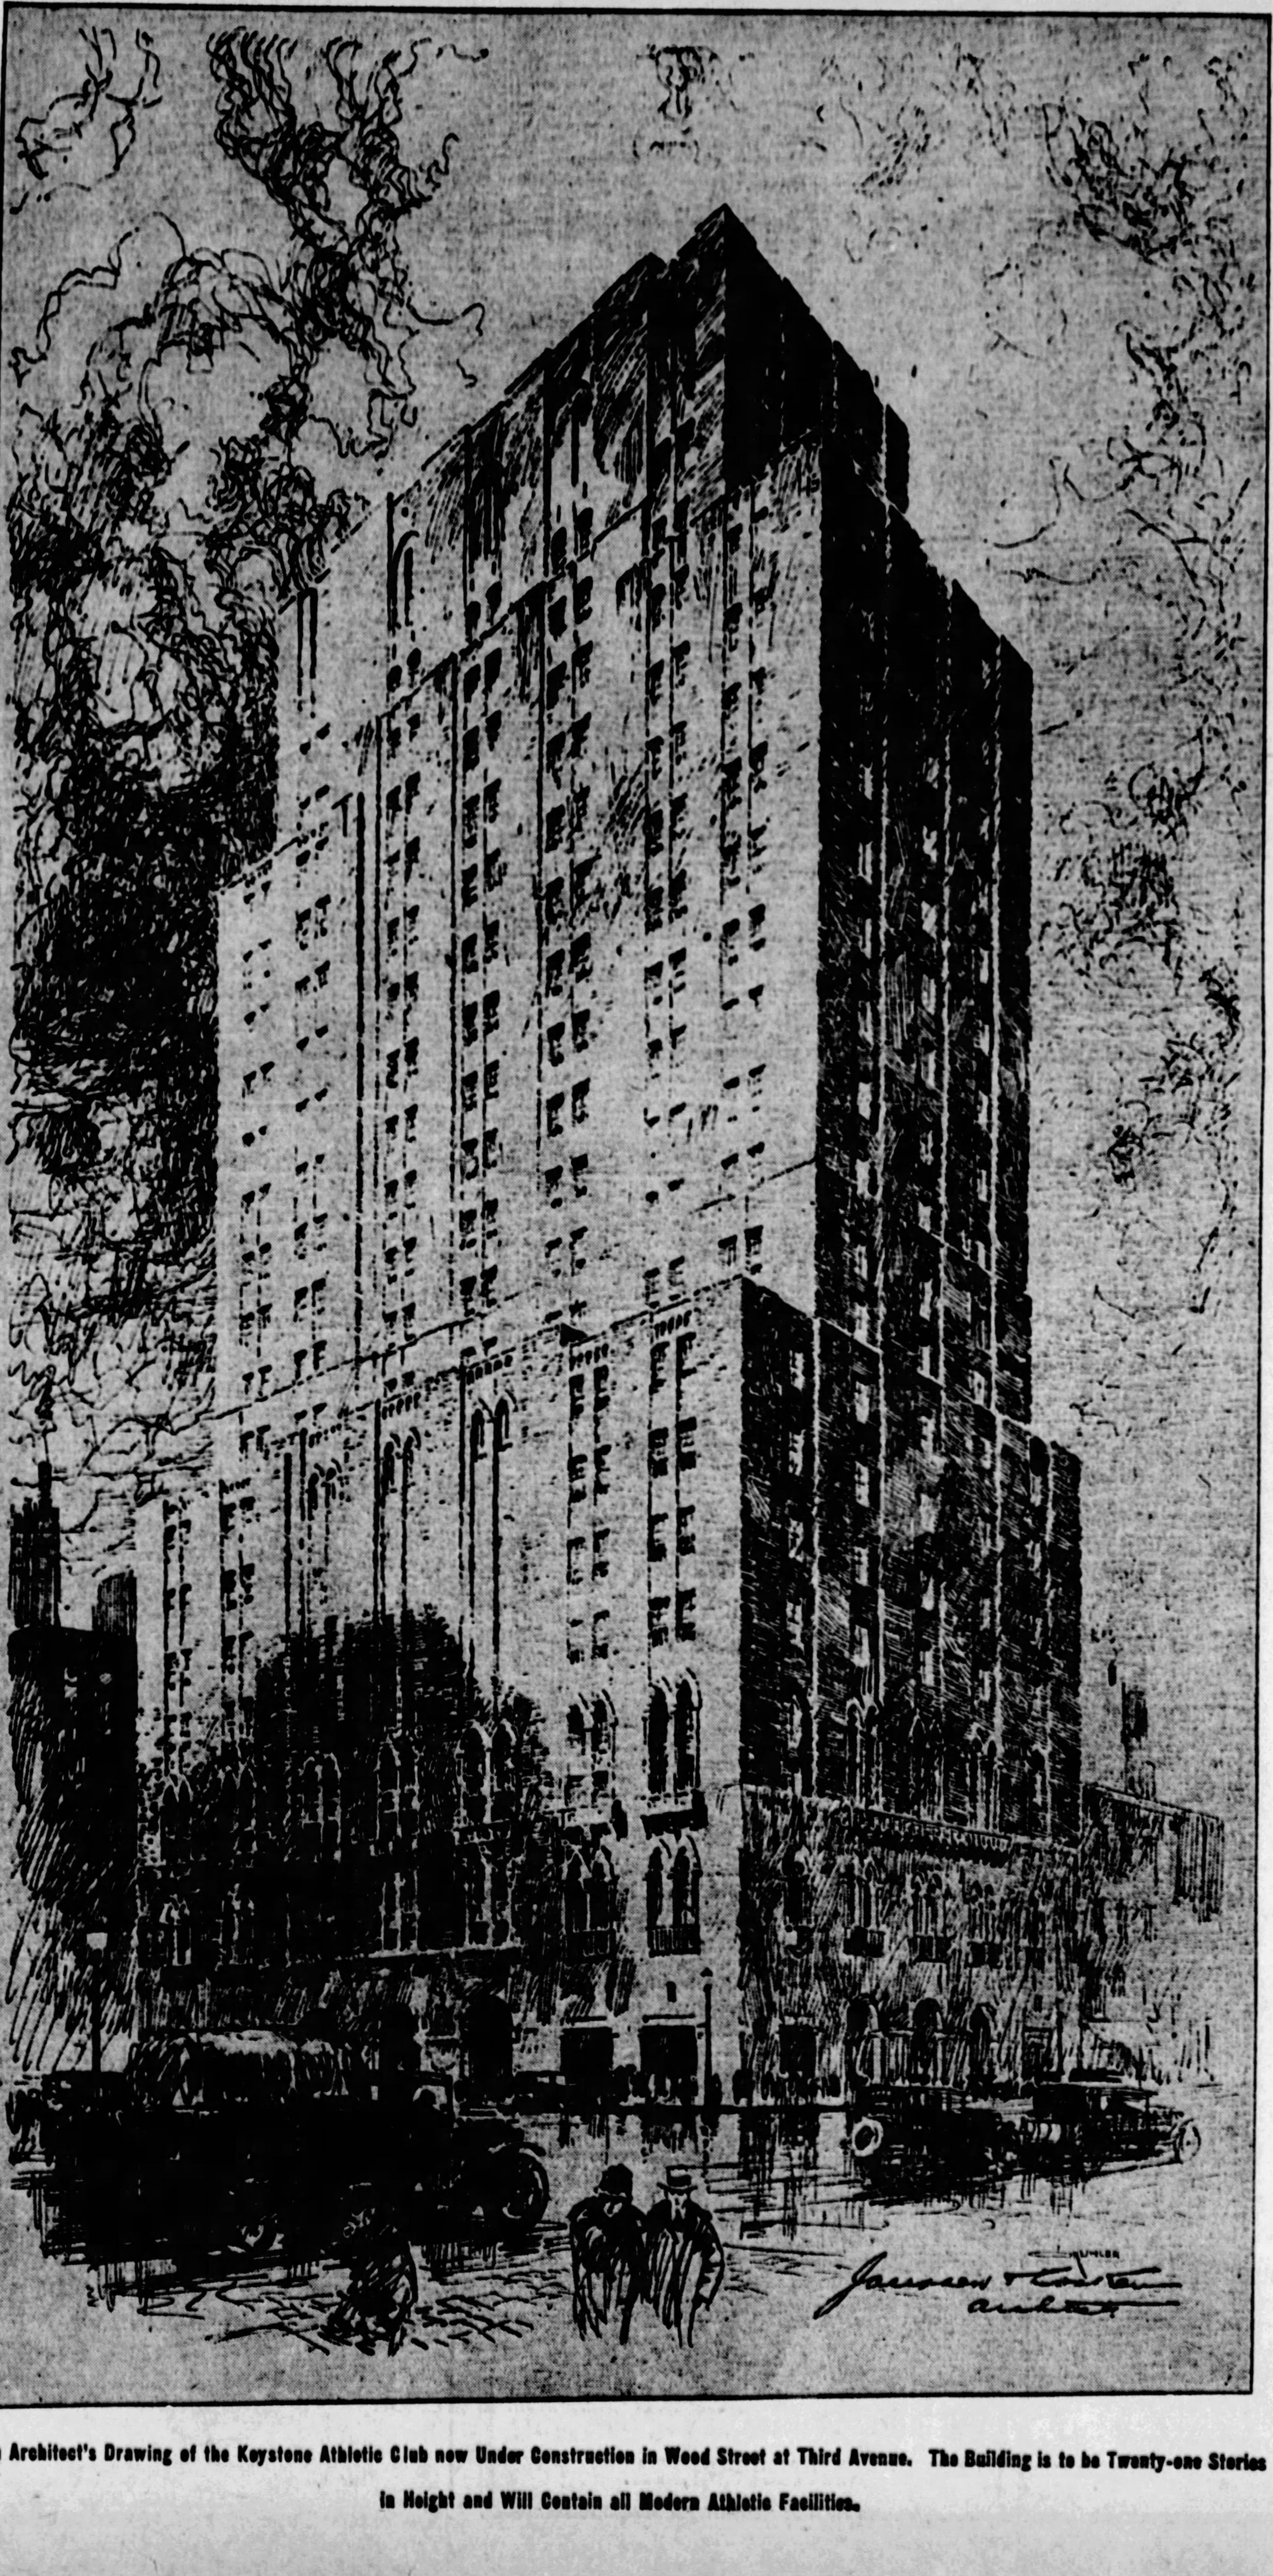
New Downtown Club Fills City's Need

PROPOSED BUILDING IN WOOD ST. FOR KEYSTONE CLUB



An Architect's Drawing of the Keystone Athletic Club now Under Construction in Wood Street at Third Avenue. The Building is to be Twenty-one Stories in Height and Will Contain all Modern Athletic Facilities.

Twenty-One Story Building in Wood Street for Keystone Athletic Club. Construction Already Started on Modern Edifice in Downtown Triangle. Location an Asset.

With the construction of the Keystone Athletic Club at Wood and third avenue progressing rapidly, Pittsburgh business men are realizing that when completed it will satisfy one of the city's greatest needs. Pittsburgh has long needed a large downtown athletic club of high standing; a club where heads of industrial concerns can meet their friends, either at luncheon, dinner or on the gymnasium floor.

The new Keystone club in its own 21-story building promises not only to be one of Pittsburgh's finest clubs, but one of the greatest athletic clubs in the United States. Leaders and men of enterprise from every channel of business, industry and the professions, will in the club, make new and lasting contacts.

Within five minutes walk from practically every downtown office building, the club will become a convenient place for meetings of various groups. Its 280 rooms for guests will make the entertainment of out-of-town visitors by members both cordial and satisfying. Its two floors for ladies will afford the wives and daughters of members every facility offered by any club anywhere.

Approximately 2,800 men have added their names to those of the leaders who organized the club not long ago. The location, the facilities and the character of the men now identified with the club make membership something to be desired. Names, prominent throughout Western Pennsylvania are daily being added to the long list of prominents now listed among the members.

The membership moreover, is not expensive. The initiation fee is less than is asked by similar clubs in other cities. The dues, as now established, are very modest. And when it is further considered that the memberships are transferable under certain restrictions, either for cash or by inheritance, the club assumes more and more the form of a distinct asset.

The completion of the club will take place during September next year, a long looked for occasion by the members of the new association. During the construction the club executive officers are at 206 Westinghouse Building. A visit there or a telephone call to club officers through Grant 5660 will enable prospective members to fully convince themselves that the club is a rapidly growing center for Pittsburgh's leading business men.

The ground breaking for the new club house took place in July, with scores of the club members watching. The finishing touches on the foundation will be completed soon and the iron workers then will take over the work.

Civic leaders will welcome the new club which will make the city second to none for fine clubs. The beautiful structure also will add greatly to Wood street.

"GO-GETTERS" ENROLLING FRIENDS

A concentrated membership drive by 14 divisions composed of approximately 250 of the best "go-getting" members of the Keystone Athletic Club will be launched today and the enlistment of new members will continue throughout the remainder of the month. This will be the first effort to secure additional members since the drive held last July.

The first meeting of the "go-getting" members will be held today following a luncheon in the William Penn Hotel. The heads of the division will report the number of new recruits secured during the first hours of the drive or during the last week, as many of the workers stole a march on their comrades by getting to work before the drive officially opened. The second report luncheon will be held Monday, October 24, and the final report will be made October 31.

Real rivalry is expected in the final stages of the campaign. During the last drive James Kelly, John Longabaugh, Harry Hunter, Walter Sanborn and J. C. M. White were the leaders whose men succeeded in gaining more followers. Since then every captain has been busy organizing his division. K. F. Treschow, a recent member himself, is organizing a company that promises to end among the leaders, if not at the head of the list.

In addition to the "go-getters" or "shock troops" as they will be known during the drive, 2,500 reserves have been called into action. Numbers have been assigned to every member of the club and an application blank bearing his number has been sent to him. It is requested that he secure the application of a friend on his blank. If he enlists one person, he is a "marksman;" by securing two he will become a "sharpshooter," and by securing three new members he will get the title of "expert rifleman." Any member who can secure five or more will be known as a "machine gunner."

The membership committee, consisting of George T. Ladd, chairman, and Charles J. Caspar, George W. Kepler, MacGilvray Shiras, James B. Kelly, John E. McCalmont and E. C. Clark, are working hard to bring the membership drive to a successful drive by the end of the month. They have completed organizing the "shock troops" and will be ready for an early start today in their work as field commanders.

Each applicant must be approved by the Board of Directors before he can be assured of membership.

Below is a complete list of the various divisions and the personnel of each group.

Club Manager

ARTHUR KUGEMAN

Mr. Kugeman is business manager of the Keystone Athletic Club. He is in charge of all the club affairs and pending the completion of the clubhouse has offices at 206 Westinghouse Building.

DINING ROOMS ALL ON ONE FLOOR

The Keystone Athletic Club is to be unique in many ways but particularly in the arrangements of the dining rooms and kitchen. The main dining room, the men's grill room and several smaller dining rooms all are on the same floor with the kitchen. This is the most modern arrangement for club houses of this type.

Before the plans for the new building were completed, members of the executive board made a tour of many large western cities where they inspected the leading clubs of the country. They held conferences with club officers and finally agreed that the "all on one floor" arrangement was the very best.

The report of the inspection committee showed that in many clubs the kitchen is on one floor and the main dining room on another, with the grill room and smaller lunch rooms scattered throughout the building. This hinders the service and makes unnecessary commotion in transporting eatables from the kitchen to the dining rooms.

The third floor of the new club will be given over to the dining room, the grill room and the kitchen. This will permit the speeding up of service and make it possible for the best service to be given at all times.

Arrangements have almost been completed for the securing of one of the best chefs in the city to take over the supervision of the kitchen. He will be aided by a corps of capable assistants who at all times will be able to offer the most dainty dishes and a well cooked meal. Club officials are determined that the food to be served at the club should be the finest obtainable.

SPECIAL SERVICE FOR MEMBERS

Members of the Keystone Athletic Club are offering something novel and helpful in their personal service department. This department is now operating at 206 Westinghouse Building under the direction of J. J. Welsh. The department was organized some months ago by Arthur Kugeman, the club's business manager. It was one of the first outside departments organized for the convenience of the members.

The department takes many small burdens off the shoulders of the members. A call to Mr. Welsh and one can have a reliable club representative to about getting Pullman reservations for an overnight trip. Again, if it is theater tickets needed, the personal service department is always on hand to see that they are secured. Since its organization the department has operated continually and has proven a great success.

HANDBALL COURT HAS LARGE BALCONY

Handball and squash courts of regulation size with galleries for each of the courts will be included in the new Keystone Athletic Club, being constructed in Wood street between Third avenue and the Boulevard of the Allies. The galleries will be large enough to accommodate a good crowd and when championship contests are being staged there will be plenty of room for all the fans.

MEMBERS BEING CAREFULLY PICKED

The organizers of Pittsburgh's newest athletic club, the Keystone Athletic Club, whose home is under construction at Wood street and Third avenue, were careful and considerate in their selection of members during the early days of the association, as now is shown in the character of present members. The membership of the club, now totaling about 2,800, represents Pittsburgh's business leaders.

The members of the club are the heads of Pittsburgh's biggest manufacturing concerns, judges, attorneys, doctors and leaders in many other walks of life. Its president is E. H. Eggleston, manager of the American Radiator Company. Charles J. Caspar, central district manager of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, is vice president, and J. C. M. White, manager of the Price-Waterhouse Company, is treasurer. Harry H. Hunter, president of the Samuel Black Company, realtors, is secretary.

The officers of the club together with the following compose the Board of Directors: George W. Kepler, secretary and treasurer of the Bessemer and Lake Erie Railroad; W. Y. Cocken of Janssen & Cocken, architects; Attorney John E. McCalmont, James B. Kelly, vice president of Mellon-Stuart Company; E. C. Clark of the Martin Brick Company, MacGilvray Shiras of the Carnegie Steel Company, George T. Ladd of the Ladd Water Tube Boiler Company and Leo G. Griffith, manager of Cassatt and Company.

NON-RESIDENTS HOUSED

The Keystone Athletic Club will be of great value to the out-of-town business man who makes frequent visits to the city. Not only does he secure membership in one of the city's leading clubs, but he is always sure of securing accommodations while in Pittsburgh. The new clubhouse downtown will have 280 sleeping rooms, each with bath. All the rooms will be large outside chambers, comfortably furnished.

The club is centrally located for the out-of-town visitors, being near the railroad stations and in the center of business district in which he will spend most of his time. From the club he will easily be able to arrange his visits to the business men and a quiet talk with them at lunch in the club will be greatly in his favor.

DIRECT CLUB ACTIVITIES

KEYSTONE OFFICIALS

Much responsibility is resting on the officials of the Keystone Athletic Club at this time while the construction of the new clubhouse in Wood street is under way. The men in office have given much of their time to the club duties. Left to right they are Charles J. Caspar, vice president; J. C. M. White, treasurer; Harry H. Hunter, secretary, and E. H. Eggleston, president.

Magazine For Keystone Members

The members of the Keystone Athletic Club are kept posted on the latest club news and the important news events outside the club circles by the "Keystone Topics," a newsy little booklet published monthly. In addition to making complete reports of all club affairs, the booklet has lengthy articles about all the important sporting events, one or two humorous stories and briefs on various other outstanding bits of news.

BILLIARD ROOM WELL LIGHTED

The billiard room of the Keystone Athletic Club now being constructed in Wood street will be one of the most frequented rooms in the entire building, as it is to be one of the most up-to-date billiard rooms in the country, present members of the club say. The billiard room, with the lounge, will occupy an entire floor.

By a novel architectural arrangement the billiard room will be provided with outside light, a prime factor in making the room an enjoyable place to secure recreation. The lounge, too, will be a delightfully comfortable place to rest while waiting for a friend.

Club's Benefits Are Pointed Out

The men who have already enrolled as members of the Keystone Athletic Club are virtually all business men, club officials say. This is determined by the questions they ask and the manner in which they make their inquiries concerning the benefits they are to receive as club members. Four questions that are asked by almost every one of the members are: What assurance is there that the club will be erected; what does the club offer members and guests; what does it offer the members' families; and what reason is there for joining.

For the first question, the answer is: the club now has approximately 2,800 members and the membership quota will be reached shortly when an additional few hundred have joined; the excavation for a 21-story home has been almost completed and a bond issue of $1,630,000 has been sold. The Mellon-Stuart Company have the building contract, which calls for completion September 1, 1928.

The club offers a downtown location, convenient to railroads, theaters, parking space and business. It has 280 sleeping rooms, large and small dining rooms and cafe service; conference, reception, lounge and card rooms, a radio room, pool, billiards and bowling; a swimming pool and a complete gymnasium; handball and squash courts; Turkish and Swedish baths; locker rooms and a barber shop.

For the family the club offers a reception and lounge room, dining rooms, card room, pool and gym; a beauty parlor and maid service for the ladies and a children's playroom. Among the reasons offered for joining the club are that the club is an assured reality, the assets of the club are rapidly increasing in value, the memberships likewise are increasing in value; the memberships are transferable; the quota of life memberships is almost exhausted; the quota of charter memberships has been completed; the resident membership is $200 and as the quota is being filled the price will increase. The quota for non-resident memberships is small and is filling up rapidly. No dues are to be paid until the club is opened.

If the present membership had waited until the club was erected before joining, there would be no club.

"Going up"- the newer way

RISE a dozen floors at once, or stop at every floor—your ascent is unbroken by sickening starts or jarring stops, in a building having elevators with Westinghouse equipment. Change of speed is gradual and pleasant. With the Westinghouse system of variable voltage control, speed is independent of load, and travel at 800 feet a minute is possible.

Landings level with the floor

From this method of control has grown another contribution to elevator comfort—Westinghouse "Automatic Inductor Control". The operator doesn't jolt nor jockey, trying to level with the floor—he doesn't need to. The car will stop of its own accord, exactly at the floor level—there'll be no "step up" or "step down" to snare heedless heels.

CLUB OFFICERS WORKING

MEN PRAISED FOR THEIR LABORS

Too much praise cannot be given to the men who organized the club and who were able to carry on the work during the early days when the membership was but a few score and the idea not yet fully materialized. The present officers have carried on the work in a praiseworthy manner. They have kept up the enthusiasm that was necessary to make the club a success and have pushed the project continually.

E. H. Eggleston, the president, is a man who is looked up to by the members of the organization. He is a good business man and is able to fill the president's chair in fitting manner. This also is true of Charles J. Caspar, J. C. M. White and Harry H. Hunter, the vice president, treasurer and secretary, respectively. The four men are continually laboring to make the club second to none in the entire country.

The board of directors also is a fine body of prominent business men who have devoted considerable of their time to club work. The board is composed of George W. Kepler, W. Y. Cocken, John E. McCalmont, James B. Kelly, E. C. Clark, MacGilvray Shiras, George T. Ladd and Leo G. Griffith.

FIRST FLOOR ARCADE WILL HAVE SHOPS

Impossible as it is to visualize through the printed word the architectural beauty that will enhance the club, or the many features catering to the small details that mean so much, a short description of the new edifice will help somewhat in picturing what soon is to be a reality.

Entrance to the street floor of the new Keystone Athletic Club building will be possible either from Wood street, the Boulevard of the Allies or Third avenue. The boulevard and Third avenue entrances will be reached through an arcade which will span the block, providing splendid store space fronting the arcade proper.

Shop space also will be provided on the ground floor of the club building fronting on Wood street and Third avenue, thus offering the institution a valuable source of revenue.

A lounging corridor will greet the member when he enters the building and three elevators, two for men and one for the women, will be in continuous service to transport guests and members to the upper floors. The executive offices and a check room will also occupy a portion of the ground floor.

They returned last month from a trip to Moscow, the Volga, Stalingrad, the Russian steppes and villages, Tiflis, Batum, Odessa, Kiev and parts of Poland and Germany.

KEYSTONE CLUB IN CENTER OF CITY

One of the outstanding features of the new Keystone Athletic Club that makes membership desirable to the business man is the central location of the clubhouse now under construction in Wood street at Third avenue. The clubhouse will be within five minutes' walk from any one of the many downtown office buildings.

The nearness of the clubhouse makes it possible for the members to meet their friends there at luncheon, even though their time be limited. Again it makes possible a short work-out on the gym floor during the day without a long absence from the office. The club also will be a convenient place to meet the family for dinner before going to one of the downtown theaters.

The architecture and arrangement of the new clubhouse will make one of the most beautiful buildings of its kind in the country. Plans were submitted and rejected, altered and then made over until every detail was carefully thought out and definitely settled. Nothing that would be of the slightest convenience to members and guests was overlooked. Before the plans finally were accepted and passed by the board of directors, members of the board made a tour of many large cities, visiting the clubhouse in each city.

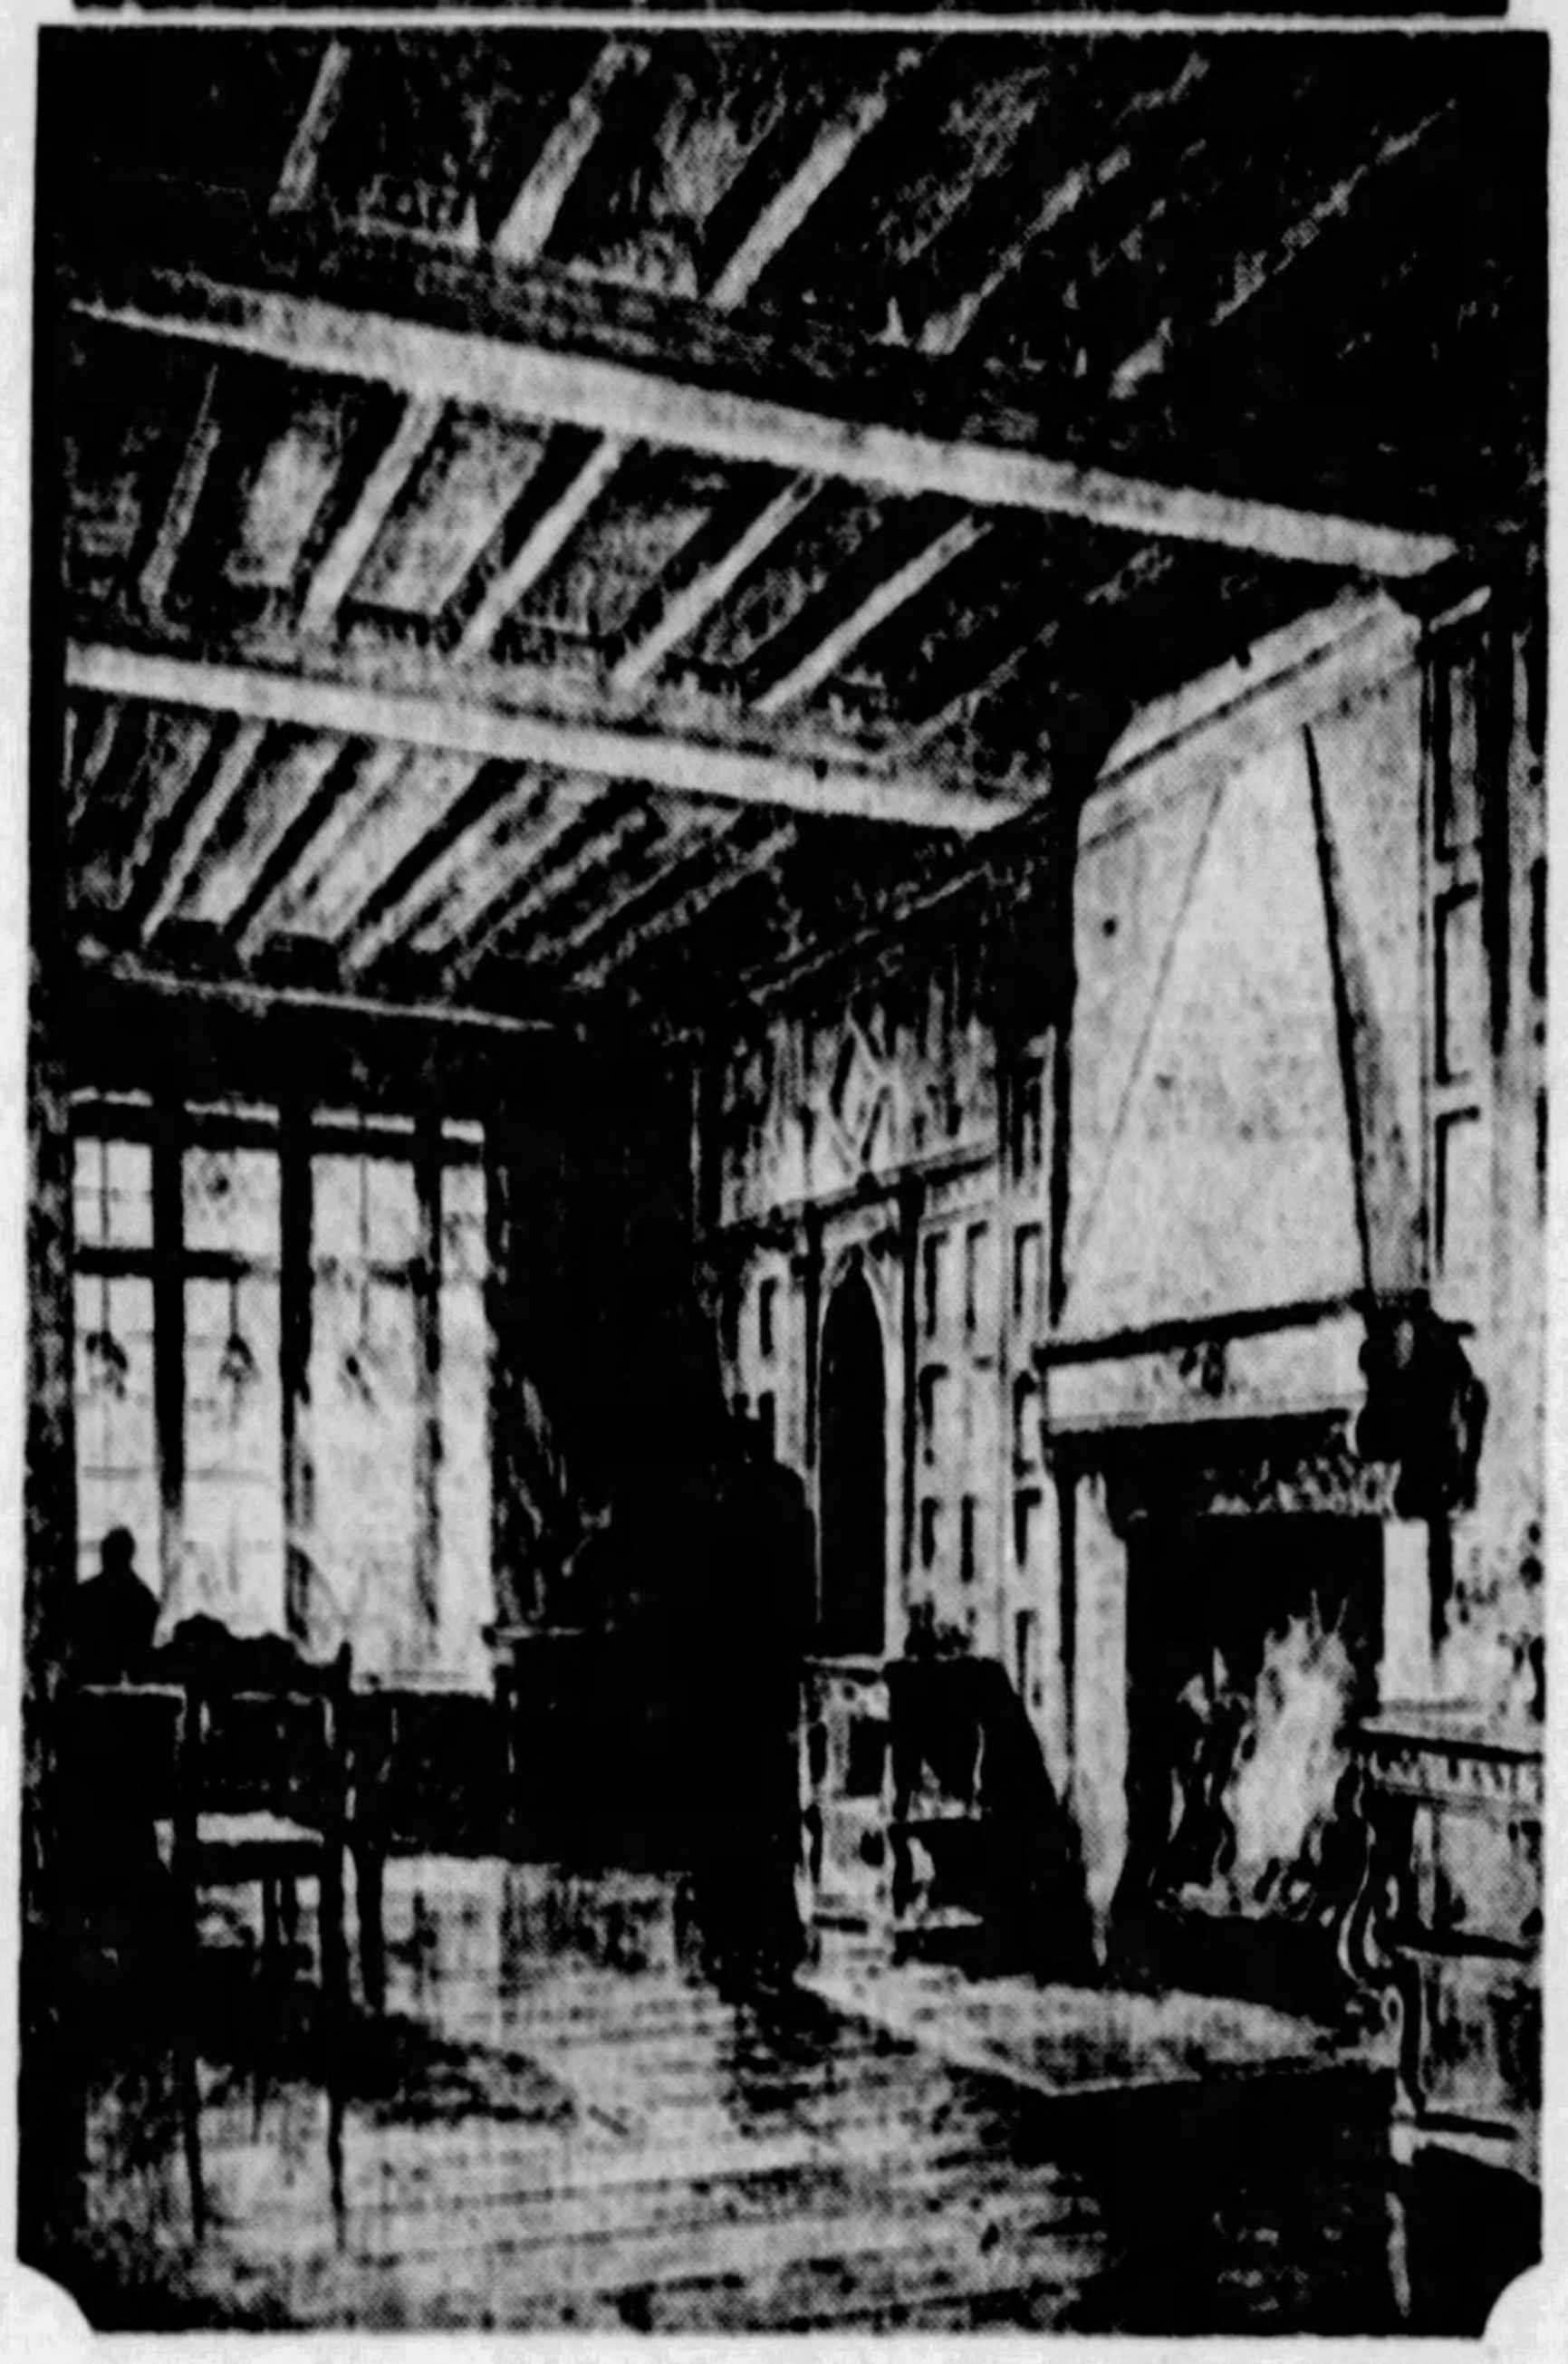
The ground floor of the building will have many store fronts and a main entrance from Wood street. The main lobby will be on the second floor, which also will house the office, a library, the lounge, billiard rooms and barber shop. The third floor will house the main dining room, a grill room and kitchen. The arrangement providing for the housing of the main dining room, the grill room and kitchen on one floor is the most modern of all clubhouse arrangements, officials of the club say.

The fourth floor will have several small dining rooms and card rooms. The fifth and sixth floors will care for the ladies' locker rooms and handball courts. The men's locker rooms and swimming pool will be on the sixth floor, as will the galleries for the handball courts. There will be Turkish baths and squash courts, locker rooms and squash court galleries on the seventh and eighth floors. From the ninth to the 19 floors, inclusive, there will be 286 sleeping rooms for the members and their out-of-town guests.

Architecturally the exterior of the club will present a beautiful and impressive structure. Its lines are to follow the "stepback" profile which marks the latest type of modern building. The building will be arcaded at the back and space here will be available for stores. All told, there will be a rental space of 11,800 square feet. This will not only add to the revenues of the club, thus making its maintenance secure, but it will centralize facilities to give greater convenience to members.

The rise of the Keystone's building at the downtown corner means an important step in the rebirth of this section of the downtown district, which has recently seen several outstanding structural developments. Just across Third avenue stands the new Y. M. C. A. Building. Across Wood street lies a plot of ground which has been acquired by the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., which in time expects to erect a splendid new banking house.

MEN'S GRILL ROOM



IN KEYSTONE CLUB

A convenient place for members of the new Keystone Athletic club. The room is on the third floor of the building, ad-joining the main dining room.

CLUB TO HAVE FINE POOL

A large gymnasium containing virtually every conceivable bit of athletic equipment, a beautiful swimming pool and a room for Turkish baths will be three important divisions of the Keystone Athletic Club that soon will be rising in Wood street between the Boulevard of the Allies and Third avenue.

To have a successful athletic club it is necessary to have a good gymnasium and pool. Members of the executive board of the Keystone club secured the advice of many prominent athletes before they had the plans drawn for the gymnasium. In addition to the baths, the pool and the gym, there are large squash courts and also handball courts.

The three 8's sink--by "Standard"

Just the swish of a damp cloth keeps this new "Standard" sink glistening

What is more exasperating than trying to restore the brightness of a stained, dirt-grained sink by scouring? Rub...rub...rub. Still the grey lines remain. The dirt is pitted in. No amount of rubbing will remove it.

Now comes a sink that makes scouring old-fashioned—the "Standard" "Three 8's" sink, with its exclusive Acid-Resisting Enamel. Glass-smooth, superlatively hard, this enamel gives no chance for dirt to become ground in. Even the acid juices of fruits and vegetables cannot roughen or discolor it. It stays gleamingly clean—always.

The directly attached garbage container, with removable aluminum receptacle, swings under the sink on a folding bracket.

The "Three 8's" sink is made in three styles and seven sizes. Come in to see it. The trade-mark "Standard" A-R, identifying Acid-Resisting Enamel, is impressed in every "Three 8's" sink. Write for interesting booklet.

OPEN CAMPAIGN FOR MEMBERS

Throughout the city today members of the Keystone Athletic Club will set aside business cares long enough to call upon one or two friends and explain to them the benefits of being a member of the new organization. An extensive membership drive opens today and a large force of workers will be enlisting new members.

NO PARTIES TO ANNOY CLUB GUESTS

Traveling men who intend to make the Keystone Athletic Club their headquarters while they are in Pittsburgh will be gratified to learn that every precaution will be taken to maintain inviolate the state features of the club. Although this is being done, the commodious nature of the building will make possible the allotment of unusually generous quarters to serve the needs and cater to the happiness and enjoyment of the ladies.

An entire floor has been provided in the plans for the building, to be dedicated to their pleasure and comfort. Daughter, of course, will always find a welcome and with her mother will enjoy all the features that can be installed for their mutual comfort and enjoyment. One of the outstanding departments for the women will be a beauty parlor.

A growing boy will also find pleasure in the membership of his father. The club will provide recreation for him as well as for his father. Here he will meet the sons of other members and will form friendships and contacts that will last him through life. It will also mean that father and son will get closer together by having a place where they can swim and play under most favorable conditions.

ALL CONCERNED IN PLANS

Every member of the Keystone Athletic Club knows that the evolution of the club has not been a problem for the architect. Much discussion has been engaged in and suggestions from hundreds of members have been considered. Questions about the swimming pool, the squash and handball courts and many other facilities were debated before the final plans were outlined. A large number of members have voluntarily, at their own expense, inspected athletic clubs in other cities in an effort to find out what features to include—in other words, how best to create a club which would give well rounded service.

Keystone Athletic Club Satisfies Long Unfilled Need Downtown

Modern Twenty-One Story Home Brings Athletic Facilities to Office Door

A dream for many years of the leaders among downtown business and professional men for a common meeting ground is coming true. No longer will it be necessary to meet "under the clock" and then wonder where to go for the casual business conference; a retreat from the cares and worries of the office; a good place to eat; a place for athletic diversion or just a place to while away an hour or so, for all of these and many other features will soon be found beneath one roof—that of the Keystone Athletic Club, downtown Pittsburgh's social cathedral.

That demand for a downtown social center for business and professional men and their families has long existed, is evidenced by the fact that already approximately 2,800 men have become members of the organization.

The central location of the club, the modest membership fee and the high membership standard maintained from its beginning, are no doubt largely responsible for the spectacular success.

All who have seen the club expand from the nucleus of a few business men with imagination and foresight into the organization as it now exists, predict for the club a future position as the Mecca of Pittsburgh business and social life.

With the clubhouse, a beautiful 21-story building now under construction, the membership continues to grow. Within the next few weeks an additional seven hundred Pittsburghers will have become affiliated with the club, which number will fill its present quota. Pittsburgh's business leaders did not take long to realize that the Keystone Athletic Club would take a foremost place in the life of the city, and even before the final plans for the clubhouse had been decided upon, more than half the complete membership of 3,500 had been secured.

Situated in the heart of the Golden Triangle, the club will stand out as THE place for men who spend the greater part of the day downtown, to go to meet their friends or for a bit of exercise that is necessary in the lives of all workers. The Wood street block between Third avenue and the Boulevard of the Allies can be reached within five minutes from almost any downtown building.

While it is the central location that seems to be the greatest attraction for the prospective members, the high type of business man that they know they will meet at the club is probably the best inducement that can be offered. A glance at the list of present members is enough to convince anyone that much is to be gained by the acquaintances he is sure to make by belonging to such an organization.

To a citizen of Pittsburgh the club offers a downtown headquarters, convenient to railroads, theaters and TO HIS BUSINESS. For the non-resident who must make frequent trips here, the club offers the best of accommodations, the plans for the new building calling for 280 sleeping rooms. No matter whether it be a local man or one who lives miles away, the club always will be a stopping place where he will entertain his friends in comfort.

The club provides several conference rooms in which business meetings can be held, lounge rooms for rest and informal chats and card rooms, billiard rooms and a radio room for entertainment. There will be a large main dining room and a number of smaller dining rooms, caring for the formal dinner and for the luncheon engagement.

As an athletic club the organization offers the best that possibly can be obtained. A modern gymnasium will contain the latest and best athletic equipment. The swimming pool will be of the latest design, and there will be handball courts and squash courts, both provided with galleries.

Architecturally, the new building will be a beautiful and impressive structure. It will be of the "step-back" type, the most modern of all building styles. The main entrance will be from Wood street, the first floor given over to shops and stores. The main lobby and office will be on the second floor.

The many features the club offers its members are important to the man who hesitates. Whether he feels that he already belongs to too many clubs or whether he feels that he ought not to join, he must be impressed when he considers the location, the facilities and the character of men now identified with the Keystone Athletic Club.

Membership, moreover, is not expensive. The initiation fee is less than is asked by similar clubs in other cities. The dues as now established are very modest. All that is required to join now is the payment of the initiation fee. No dues will be collected until the club is opened next fall.

The new club has been happily named. It will, in a literal way, as well as figuratively, be the "keystone" of downtown Pittsburgh. Men who ordinarily hurry from the downtown district each afternoon will find a satisfying refuge a few steps from their offices. They will find the club ideal as a place where they may meet their families prior to going to the theater.

Sections such as the South Hills, West End and North Side will find great value in the club, for it will afford a common meeting place within a short distance of their homes and will preclude the necessity of traveling through the city, always a task in present-day traffic congestion.

The Keystone is to be a real club, not only for men but for their womenfolks. Ample space will be fitted for the comfort and convenience of the ladies, who will have at their command every possible facility. Yet the members' quarters will be preserved inviolate, and they may use the pool and handball courts or any other athletic facility without arbitrary rearrangement of their personal schedules.

Just across Third avenue stands the new Young Men's Christian Association Building. Across Wood street is property which has been acquired by the Bank of Pittsburgh N. A., which in time expects to erect a splendid new banking house. The rise of the 21-story clubhouse will be an important step in the development of this section.

The career of the club has been an interesting one. It was chartered May, 1925. The title to its present site was obtained December, 1926, and the first weekly meetings were started in that same month. At first there were weekly luncheons held, but this has been discarded and the club now maintains temporary headquarters in the Westinghouse Building.

Early this year work was started on the razing of the St. Charles Hotel, the excavation work following immediately afterward. June 15 of this year the club's bonds, totaling $1,630,000, were sold. The Mellon-Stuart Company, contractors, are the builders, and the structure is expected to be completed by next fall.

After summing up all the benefits a business man would secure by membership in the Keystone Athletic Club, it is easy to realize why the club has gone ahead by leaps and bounds. From the very start it was a club for men of character and influence. Its leaders are all prominent business men of this city and it is a Pittsburgh organization. When its beautiful home is completed next fall it will be one of the show spots of the city, and its members will be proud to say they were "in it" from the first.

In just a few weeks the structural steel workers will be busily engaged in erecting the massive girders over the excavation and within less than a year this beautiful structure will be ready for its members. What a reception there will be on that day of the formal opening! Then Pittsburgh will realize more than ever that the Keystone Athletic Club is a lasting institution. Then scores of men will be drawn to membership by the completed organization. But WHY WAIT till initiation fees are advanced?

Many have watched the club's progress through its early stages—from the day, two years ago, when the idea was born in the minds of a group of Pittsburghers to the present, when almost 3,000 men from all parts of the Pittsburgh district are banded together by the common tie of membership. Those who have faith in the club are certain that the Keystone is destined to become a dominant force in Pittsburgh club life and one of the greatest athletic clubs in the East.

Another thing must be considered. While the club organizers and the present officials are all men of fine character and leading business men here, it is not they alone that make the club. They plan and labor and organize and with proper encouragement, attend to financing and construction. They can at length supply a complete and magnificently appointed clubhouse. But ONLY THE MEMBERS CAN MAKE THE CLUB. Each new member as he joins the organization is asked to do his part. To do this one must be a BELIEVER. It can safely be said that every man enrolled as a member is a firm believer in this latest civic enterprise.

With such a group of determined men enrolled as members, with work already started and with enough money to insure the completion of the building, there will result a clubhouse second to none in the country and an organization composed of city's leaders, standing for the best in business, athletic and social life.

THIS SPACE PRESENTED BY A FRIEND OF AND A BELIEVER IN THE CLUB

DAILY EXERCISE MADE POSSIBLE FOR BUSINESS MEN

BUSINESS MEN WELCOME NEW CLUB

Ever since the plans of the Keystone Athletic Club became known to the public and the word was broadcast that a large athletic club was to be erected down town, officials of the organization have been receiving compliments from business men who long have felt the need of such a club. The very fact that it is near their office has brought many into its membership.

The nearness to offices will make it possible for business men to enjoy a workout during the day without being away from their office for any length of time. They also can hold business conferences at the club if their offices are unable to accommodate a gathering.

The announcement of the club plans was indeed a pleasant surprise to those who had not previously been affiliated with the new organization. It answered the long unfilled want of many who desire daily exercise and also those who like to meet their friends at luncheon for a social chat.

Two Offices Offer Information on Membership

The coming to the front of the Keystone Athletic Club has resulted in many inquiries from Pittsburghers as to how membership may be obtained. The executive offices at 206 Westinghouse Building is open each day to persons desiring information concerning the club.

A temporary headquarters at 401 Wood street also serves as an information bureau to the public. Any prospective member is extended an invitation to call at either of the offices.

CROPS KILLED BY FROST

FRANKLIN, Pa., Oct. 17.—The mercury fell to 30 degrees in Franklin and to 26 and 27 in outlying Venango county points this morning, the lowest of the fall season. Fog saved Franklin from frost, but in other sections all growing crops in the field were killed.

PARISH HERE 50 YEARS OLD

A three-day celebration marking the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of St. Joseph's parish began yesterday. The Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of Pittsburgh, officiated in the morning at a solemn pontifical high mass.

This morning a solemn requiem mass was sung for the deceased priests and members of the parish. A banquet will be held tonight in the Braddock council, Knights of Columbus. Tomorrow morning a solemn mass of thanksgiving will be celebrated. An entertainment given by the parish dramatic and literary club will close the celebration tomorrow night.

The Rev. Jacob M. Wertz of Pittsburgh, the only living former pastor of St. Joseph's, preached the jubilee sermon yesterday. Four charter members of the parish were present. They were Mrs. Mary Miller, Mrs. Catherine Guenther, Mrs. Caroline Buechs and John Miller.

BERKEY CHURCH, NEAR JOHNSTOWN, DESTROYED

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 17.—Fire originating from an overheated furnace last midnight caused the destruction of the Berkey Church of the Brethren, Paint township, near here. Firemen succeeded in saving several nearby buildings. The loss is $7,500.

Coat Wrong Size, Bootlegging Case Fails

STEUBENVILLE, O., Oct. 17.—A coat which didn't fit saved Mike Fungatis from going to jail today.

Federal prohibition operatives raided a coffee house and found Mike there. They also found a half pint of liquor in a coat.

"Ah!" they cried pointing to Mike, "A Bootlegger!"

So they took him away.

In court today Fungatis tried on the coat. It didn't fit.

"Discharged," said the judge to Mike.

$1,000 DIAMOND RING TAKEN BY BURGLARS

Burglars who last night entered the home of J. E. Conley, 5335 Rosetta street, took a diamond ring valued at $1,000, another diamond valued at $200, two wrist watches and $81 in cash, according to a report to the police.

NEW YORKER TO URGE 5TH AVE. IMPROVEMENT

In furtherance of the aim of the Fifth Avenue Association of Pittsburgh to make that thoroughfare a street of stately edifices and attractive shops, William J. Pedrick, vice president and general manager of the Fifth Avenue Association of New York, an organization with a similar purpose, will describe, in an address at an informal dinner at the William Penn tonight, what has been accomplished in the eastern metropolis. He is the guest of the local association today.

WILLIAM J. PEDRICK

Mr. Pedrick will suggest what may be done here, through civic co-operation, to improve the appearance of Fifth avenue and the downtown business section. His subject will be "The Importance of a Civic Organization in the Development of a City." Lantern slides will illustrate his points. R. K. Mellon, president of the local association, will preside.

The other officers are: Edgar J. Kaufmann and Benjamin Dangerfield, Jr., vice presidents; Clarence R. Nesbitt, treasurer, and F. LeMoyne Page, secretary.

The society, organized last spring, proposes to discourage the use of property for any purpose that would not benefit the whole district, to discourage the erection of unsightly buildings and store fronts, to encourage the improvement of the appearance of buildings, to assist in the adoption of satisfactory sign ordinances, to secure adequate lighting for the Fifth avenue district, to cooperate in roadway repair and maintenance and street cleaning, and to insure adequate police protection and the elimination of begging and peddling.

Most of the merchants, tenants and land owners of Fifth avenue are members, as well as some on nearby streets.

ST. ANDREWS CHURCH WILL PRESENT PLAY

A play and musical program will be presented tomorrow night in St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church, Hampton street, by the women's auxiliary of the congregation.

Analyze the Cost of Any Pipe System

then consider what will happen to the investment if the pipe fails

Examining the factors that go to make up the price of a pipe system, you find that the pipe item itself amounts to only 6%, perhaps 10% of the total installation cost.

The sum that can be saved by using the cheapest pipe obtainable is 3% to 5% of the cost of the system installed. But the life of any system depends, above all, on the pipe material. Cheap, modern metals lack rust resistance. Replacements soon become necessary where they are used. And in each case, the cost is ten or twenty times the cost of the pipe involved. The initial saving is soon wiped out. The entire investment is jeopardized.

Byers Pipe is made of genuine old-fashioned wrought iron. Its superior rust-resistance, demonstrated in 60 years of service, is now universally recognized. Byers Pipe is therefore considered the safest and most economical pipe material to use wherever permanency is desired.

Red Grange Hurt in Game at Chicago

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Harold "Red" Grange, former phenomenal football player of the University of Illinois team, now professional, suffered a badly torn ligament in the knee and calf of the leg here yesterday.

The injuries followed some slashing attacks in the closing minutes of the game between Grange's New York Yankees, who were finally defeated by the Chicago Bears, 12 to 0.

Grange had to be carried off the field.

DUKE-THIEL GAME SHIFTED TO FRIDAY

The game scheduled between the Duquesne University eleven and Thiel College this week has been changed from Saturday to Friday in order to allow Tommy Holleran to take his Greenville squad to the Carnegie Tech-Pitt clash at the Pitt Stadium Saturday.

REFEREE IN HOSPITAL AFTER ROW

By TOM BIRKS.

INDEPENDENT football in the Pittsburgh district received another jolt yesterday at Mertins Field, Sharpsburg, the home playing grounds of the Sharpsburg Tigers, when sectional rivalry between the Tigers and the Bloomfield Isles started a riot that finished with the referee, H. A. Mercer, landing in St. Margarets Hospital with six stitches in his head.

Feeling was very high throughout the game and the attack upon the referee followed a penalty of five yards imposed on the Isles for stalling. The trouble started in the early part of the third quarter.

The referee had removed players Taylor of Sharpsburg and Nelson of the Isles from the game for slugging. The things happened so fast that everybody on the gridiron seemed to be slugging.

After the fracas was over Manager Licker of the Tigers had the referee removed to the hospital. Mercer is classed as one of the most competent officials in the district. According to Mercer, who was interviewed last night by the writer, the Isles players accused him throughout the game of imposing penalties without reason.

Mercer has officiated in all the games played by the Tigers this season, against the Bridgeville Firemen, Hyde Park, and Glassmere games. All the managers say that he is fair and impartial. Mercer seemed confident that he knew the player that caused his injuries, after he had been ordered from the game for insulting remarks.

It is unfortunate, both teams will suffer, and Sunday football in Sharpsburg has received a deathblow. Manager Ritzell of the Tigers was sorry the trouble occurred, but how and why it happened he could not state. Manager Licker of the Tigers also stated that the Isles end of the game would be used to pay for the referee's injuries.

Penn to Tackle Big Ten Leader In Chicago

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—Having once invaded the East this season with great success the Western Conference is now preparing a warm reception for one of the big Eastern football teams next Saturday, when Pennsylvania comes to meet Chicago. The Pennsylvanians are likely to find a different team than the one they ran through and over last year at Philadelphia, for Chicago is now one of the Conference leaders, with victories over Indiana and Purdue, the latter the conqueror of Harvard two weeks ago.

In its 7-6 victory over Purdue Saturday, Chicago showed one of the smartest football teams Coach A. A. Stagg has turned out in his 36 years on the Midway.

MIDDLES AWAIT BATTLE GONG

HOMER ROBERTSON, former local middleweight, who now hails from Boston, and Maxie Rosenbloom of New York are primed for their 10-round windup in Motor Square Garden tonight. They engaged in light workouts here yesterday and have been resting since, awaiting the bell that will send them into action along about 10 o'clock.

Rosenbloom is the favorite to win, the critical fans picking him because of his greater experience against seasoned opponents and his freakish style. They figure he will outstep and outslap Robertson for the decision. The Negro contender has many backers, however, and they are confident his flashy style will bring him home the victor.

Two other Negro boxers appear on the card. Lin Jordan, middleweight of Johnstown, boxes Young Saylor of Charleroi in the eight-round semi-final, and Eddie Carver of the South Side opposes Jimmy Belmont, young knockout puncher of Braddock, in the second event.

The first bout will be between two new heavyweights, Chuck Semack and Chuck Spagnola.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

THOUGH Manager Donie Bush of the Pirates left yesterday morning for his home in Indianapolis, it's a safe guess that he will not remain idle very long.

The Buccaneer skipper thinks, talks, eats and dreams baseball all the time, with the interests of his club always at heart, which is one explanation of his success, and while it might appear to an outsider that Donie would grasp the opportunity for a rest and the work and worries of the 1927 season, a better guess is that he will busy himself at once with preparations for 1928.

BUSH believes that the old saw about the early birds catching the worm applies as strongly to baseball as to anything else, so he may be depended upon not to lose any time in starting to play his cards for the trades that he has in mind for the revision of the Corsair lineup.

Even though he works quietly, it may be taken for granted that he is getting busy already in an endeavor to make a couple of trades, particularly one that will give the Pittsburgh club a capable second baseman for next year.

It isn't Bush's way to wait for such an occasion as the annual meeting of the National League in December, when a chance will be afforded to talk business with the heads of the various other clubs in the circuit. He knows what he wants and will proceed to go after it without delay.

IN ALL probability, therefore, it will be only a day or two until the little Pirate chief begins a determined hunt with the object of bagging a player of recognized ability who will strengthen the Pittsburgh team at the midway next year.

With Hazen Cuyler as a trading basis, and a number of other players of 1927 who can be spared, Bush is in a good position to get what he desires, so the anouncement may come at no distant day that Donie has put through an important swap or two, with Cuyler and others involved, that will bring to Pittsburgh not only a second baseman of class but possibly also, if Bush can arrange it, a pitcher, a catcher and an outfielder in addition.

THERE never has been any doubt that Carnegie Tech possesses a college spirit unsurpassed anywhere, but it is being demonstrated at present more convincingly than at any previous time.

Everything was against the Skibos at the beginning of the season, as it was a hopeless task to replace such graduated stars as Yoder, Mefort and Donohoe, with Manby and Goodwin also lost. No coach or college can fill so many vacancies in a single season and develop a new team as strong as the preceding one.

Besides the schedule was one of the toughest the Tartans had ever been called upon to face.

But did those facts feaze the Schenley Park boys? Not a bit. They plunged right into their season's work with the same determination and spirit that they might have been expected to show if the indications

BUSH, TRAYNOR LEAVE CITY

Donie Bush, manager of the Pirates, left yesterday for his Indianapolis home where he will spend the winter. Donie remained over for the big banquet at the Westmoreland Country Club.

Harold (Pie) Traynor, captain of the Pirates, will leave today for the backwoods section of Wisconsin, where he will stay about two months in company with Burleigh Grimes of the Giants.

Traynor spent much of last winter in the Wisconsin woods. He liked the experience so well that he made arrangements to return. Grimes is a native of Upper Wisconsin. The two athletes expect to do a lot of fishing and hunting. Pie intends to return to his Somerville home some time before Christmas.

BAN JOHNSON STEPS DOWN

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Ban Johnson today ended his long and fighting career as president of the American League.

Johnson stepped out of office at a meeting of directors of the league, voluntarily making his indefinite resignation of last spring effective at once.

Frank Navin of the Detroit club was named acting president.

According to reliable reports, E. S. Barnard of Cleveland is the most likely candidate for the position of permanent league president.

Johnson said he was planning to "leave town for a good rest," but otherwise was unprepared to indicate what he would do.

HOPPE, DE ORO START BILLIARD DUEL TONIGHT

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—Willie Hoppe will start a 120-point handicap match of three cushion billiards against Alfredo de Oro, former holder both of the world's three-cushion and pocket billiard championships, this evening. Hoppe has agreed to give De Oro a handicap of 18 points in each of the 12 blocks.

Welker Cochran, world 18-2 balkline champion, will defend his title here December 19-21, against Jake Schaefer the former titleholder. The match will be at 1,500 points in blocks of 100 points each.

CAIN, ST. LOUIS AUTO RACE DRIVER, KILLED

VINCENNES, Ind., Oct. 17.—(UP.)—Arthur D. Cain, 35-year-old race driver of St. Louis, was instantly killed when his car skidded and overturned on the thirty-fifth lap of the last race at the George Rogers Clark speedway west of here yesterday.

Mark Billman, 23, of Indianapolis, in a car right behind Cain, swerved his machine into a fence to avoid hitting the wreckage. Billman escaped unhurt, but his car was demolished.

Panther Has Best Record of Teams In East

With a record of four games won, none lost and none tied, and of 153 points scored against none for its opponents, the Golden Panther of the University of Pittsburgh dominates the rest of the East in effectiveness and class thus far this season.

In fact, aside from Notre Dame, there isn't a college or university eleven in the country that can approach the record of the Panthers.

Eastern records thus far:

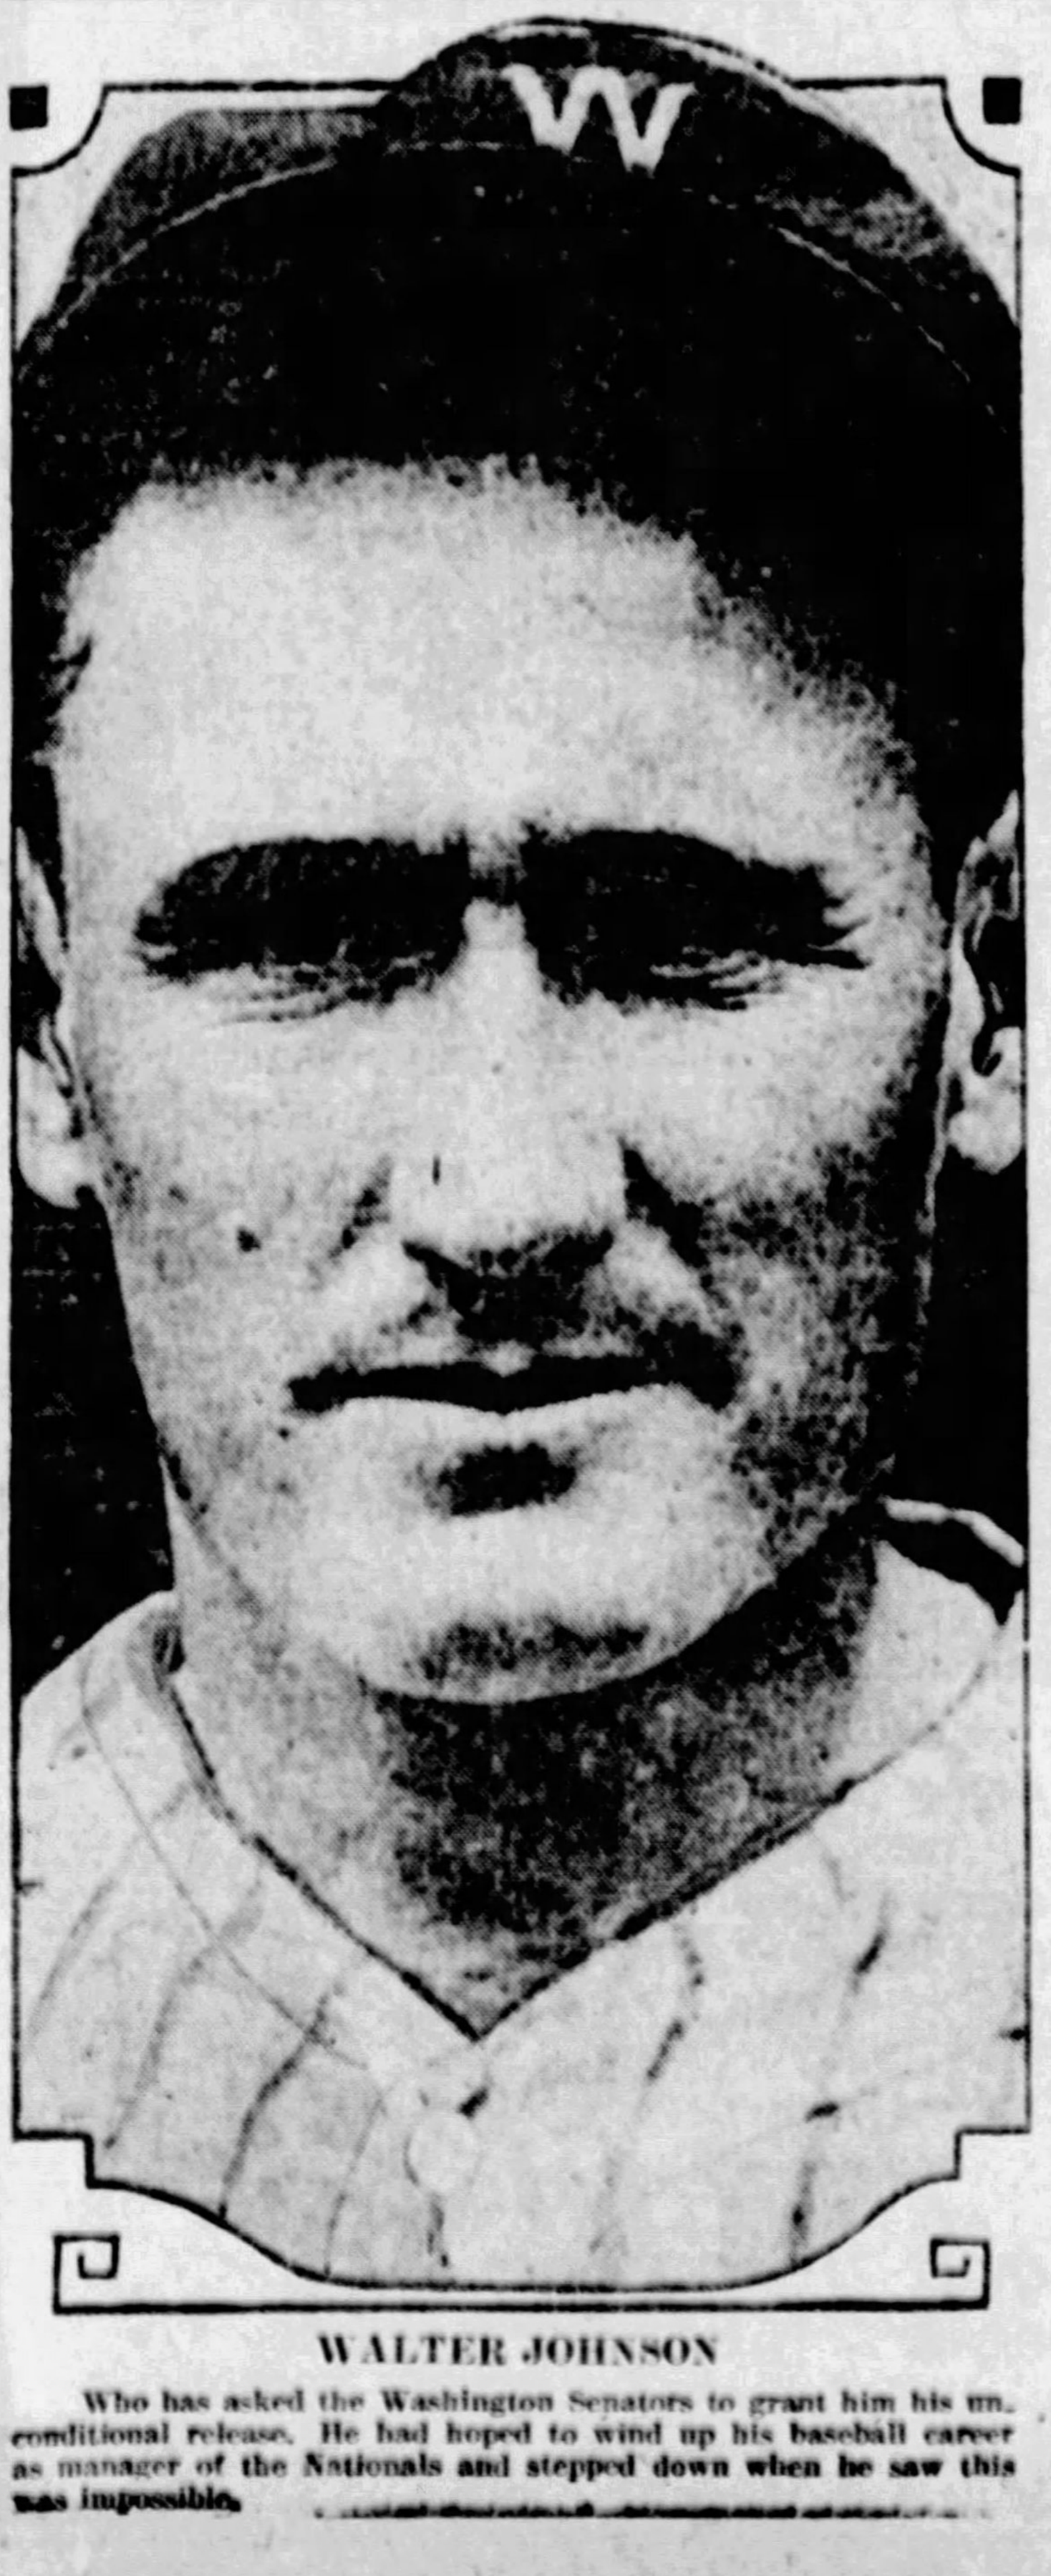
JILTED BY FATE



WALTER JOHNSON

Who has asked the Washington Senators to grant him his unconditional release. He had hoped to wind up his baseball career as manager of the Nationals and stepped down when he saw this was impossible.

Big Train Hoped to Pilot Nats

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—(UP.)—It is one of the minor tragedies of baseball that Walter Johnson would have liked to have become manager of the Washington Senators upon his retirement as a player.

"The Big Train" gave all the best years of his baseball career winning ball games for Washington from the pitching box.

Always he looked forward to the day when he could win them from the bench and coaching line.

"I hoped I could finish up my baseball days right here," Johnson said in an interview at his home in Alta Vista, just over the Maryland border.

But when the time came for him to step out as an active player the Washington Senators were being managed by Bucky Harris, a youngster who apparently has many more years of major league baseball ahead of him.

Bucky is satisfactory to Clark Griffith, president of the club, and there simply was no place for Walter Johnson in the club president's scheme of things.

"I didn't want him to think he was paying me for what I had done in the past," said the big pitcher, a bit sadly.

For Walter Johnson feels very badly about parting with the Senators under the circumstances.

He keeps up a smiling face and says that "Griff didn't send me a contract, so I just asked him to let me go as a free agent," but one gets an impression behind all that the famous pitcher feels that fate somehow has cheated him out of something he wanted from the club he had served so well for 20 years.

MAY MANAGE NEWARK

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 17.—(INS.)—Walter Johnson, famous pitcher of the Washington Senators, who has retired from active participation in baseball, may become the manager of the local International League team. Paul Block, owner of the Newark Bears, has made an attractive offer to the Big Train. Johnson is expected to make known his decision within a few days.

Old Barney wants to invest his capital in some baseball club, and it is believed he will become part owner of the local club if he accepts the post as manager.

TECH-W. & J. GAME IN REVIEW.

IN SPORTS, as in everything else, all matters are comparative. For instance, take last Saturday's football game between Carnegie Tech and Wash-Jeff at Forbes Field.

Wash-Jeff went into the battle with some doubts about how its line would stand up against Tech's forward wall. Some of the Red and Black followers there were who were afraid the Presidents' more or less green line would be torn to shreds by the Tartan opposition. Many replacements have been necessary on that W. & J. line since last year.

However, the victors' line didn't look so bad. True, it didn't stand out as an exceptionally good one, but on defense it was able to halt Carnegie's best efforts in their inception, and on offense it was able to cloak Bill Amos while he made lateral passes or handed the ball to his mates on double passes or faked passes and then went through the line himself on holes opened for him. Instead of W. & J.'s line looking bad, the shoe was on the other foot. Tech's forwards seemed to suffer in comparison, just as its backs did in comparison with W. & J.'s ball-carriers.

COMBINATION LACKING

However, this is not to be taken as a reflection on the play of the losing team. It always is easy to pick flaws in the work of a team or an individual when it or he suffers a reverse. The truth is that Carnegie is just a bit lacking in its usual all-round strength this year. It has not been able to fill the shoes of the stars it has lost from last year's team. The men who are in there are doing their best and performing nobly. The combination just simply isn't there. All colleges run into such a condition from time to time. Such periods are known as off-seasons, or lean years. All teams cannot be on a par.

Last year's Tech eleven, which defeated Notre Dame, was probably the best in the Plaid's history, yet it lost to W. & J. by a score of 17 to 6, virtually the same count as this year's team. The Tartans may come back and surprise some of their future opponents. On what was shown last Saturday, however, it will be a mistake for the Plaid supporters to bank their hopes too high for the remainder of this season.

Tech's main weakness is a lack of ball-carrying strength against a stiff defense. The usual corps of runners of varied styles is not there. In the W. & J. game the attack was concentrated mostly around Harpster's forward-passing, and that was too wild to be effective. It will be interesting to note what changes or improvements Coaches Steffen and

Jack Zivic To Return Here

JACK ZIVIC

Jack Zivic, former local welterweight star, who has been making his home at Pelham Manor, N. Y., for almost two years, is going to return to Pittsburgh.

Jack recently visited Pittsburgh with his wife and baby daughter and the old home atmosphere, among friends, gripped both Jack and the "missus," and they made up their minds to return here. They are now arranging for the sale of their home at Pelham Manor, which was built in accordance with their plans, and will be back here again as soon as the deal can be consummated.

The return of Jack will be welcomed by the Pittsburgh fans, for he always has been a good attraction here and there is a dearth of drawing cards for the Motor Square Club.

SIXTEEN COLLEGE TEAMS REMAIN IN UNDEFEATED CLASS

Penn's Grid Workouts Have Developed Into "Scull" Sessions

SOCCER

By TOM BIRKS

The cup tie fever must have prevailed in the district yesterday. While Heidelberg played to a wonderful crowd, the feelings of some of the other fans must have exploded. Quite a number of players were ordered off, and one game stopped.

The Corinthian-McPherson battle was just what it was expected to be, a real fight. Referee Corns had to give walking papers to three players in the course of the game, the McKay boys and Kosky finishing the game on the side lines. That is getting back into the old days when cup tie excitement found the referee being chased out of town.

Mike Karkalla, an old friend, was playing goal with the East Pittsburgh Magyars yesterday. Now Mike has played goal for the Pittsburgh and Cleveland Magyars. However, Mike did not have to do his stuff very long yesterday. Referee Simpson gave a penalty, some one objected, took a punch at the official and the game was over. Only fifteen minutes of playing time had elapsed.

Curry was the center of attraction yesterday. Curry Juniors swung into the cup ties against the Junior Champions. At the end of ninety minutes the game was deadlocked; neither team had scored. Then in the first part of the extra period Mather scored twice, Lyons and Chatteron bagging the goals.

Cuddy, another good cup fighting aggregation, found itself out of the Junior race yesterday when Bailey shot a fast one into the net in the first half of the game at Gallatin. Cuddy usually travels well in the cup ties, but it takes a wonderful club to get anything out of Gallatin.

The big surprise was the defeat of McPhersons by a 4-to-1 score at Cooley. McPhersons were strengthened, and its supporters figured it would win.

Yesterday's Soccer Results

Star Leaves Hospital

TONY SWEET, end on the Carnegie Tech football team, who was taken to the West Penn Hospital following Saturday's clash with Wash-Jeff at Forbes Field, left the hospital yesterday. Tony aggravated a leg injury suffered in the first game of the season, but the hurt was not as serious as first thought.

Pitt, W. & J. Among Best

By JESS CARVER.

SIXTEEN college football teams, half of which hail from the East, remained undefeated or tied as the fourth week of the 1927 college football season opens. That is a small number, when one considers the vast list of varsities that are included in the nation's bounds.

In addition to the eight in the East, there are five in the Middle West, one in the Far West and two in the South. Here's how they rank by sections:

EAST.

Dartmouth .... Syracuse
Pitt .... New York U
Princeton .... W. & J.
Army .... Cornell

MID-WEST.

Notre Dame .... Missouri
Michigan .... Haskell
Northwestern

WEST.

California

SOUTH.

Georgia .... Georgia Tech

FAVORITES BEATEN

A flock of sadder and wiser teams will limp onto practice fields throughout the country this afternoon, to start preparations for the games of the week. There are at least ten elevens that entered games of last Saturday the heavy favorite and came out on the wrong end of the score. Witness Penn, Purdue, Ohio State, Holy Cross and even dear old Georgetown. Minnesota was held to a tie by a supposedly anemic Indiana varsity and Illinois found Iowa State too tough to beat.

And don't overlook the 7-7 tie that Lafayette found on its record after the West Virginia game. Or the defeat suffered by 'Bama at the hands of Georgia Tech.

The defeats of Penn and Ohio State were the most startling. Old Penn entered the battle with State at least an 8 to 5 choice. On form, the Lions couldn't be handed a thing, but Johnny Roepke threw enough passes at Lou Young's boys to last 'em for the rest of the season. Ohio State took the Purple too lightly and then found its defense totally unable to cope with the crashing attack of "Tiny" Lewis.

Out at Forbes Field 20,000 saw a really good Washington and Jefferson eleven crush the Tartans of Tech, while Judge Wally Steffen writhed in agony on the bench. His writhings were evidently taken for signals, for the Tech team made some of the poorest guesses on the selection of their plays that have been seen in Pittsburgh for a long while. You don't get a second guess, you know, with the old apple on the seven-yard line and fourth down. The other teams gets the guess, and the ball, too.

SPORT COMMENT

SATURDAY'S 19-to-6 defeat at Wash-Jeff's hands has not changed that spirit, nor has the dope that the Plaid will be overpowered again next Saturday by Pitt's unusually strong eleven.

Undaunted by last Saturday's reverse, and in the face of the indications that it is an off-year in which they will not be able to cope successfully with Pitt, it is safe to predict that the Skibos will be found fighting to the last ditch next Saturday with every ounce of stuff they possess, backed by the rooting of students and alumni who have no superiors and few equals in loyalty and "stick-to-itiveness," particularly in the face of threatened defeat.

Too much cannot be said in praise of Carnegie Tech's spirit. Such a school is never disgraced when beaten.

Defeat means nothing to Coach Steffen's charges and their followers; it only serves to make them come back and fight all the harder next time. It is a spirit that commands admiration, no matter how many games are lost.

THE unusual power of the Pitt machine this fall was demonstrated by the manner in which the Panthers steam-rollered Drake at Des Moines. True, the mid-westerners were beaten by the Navy the preceding Saturday, 35 to 6, but to beat them on their own field 25 to 0 after a long railroad trip that does not serve to keep a team on its best edge, was no ordinary trick.

And it was just the sort of performance needed to prime the Panthers for this week's game with Carnegie Tech for the city championship.

THE victory will keep up the morale of the Blue and Gold, and the game was of the kind needed for their annual meeting with their local rivals.

It looks now more than ever as if the Pitt schedule for this year was constructed with the Carnegie Tech game particularly in view.

By playing Thiel, Grove City, West Virginia and Drake in the order named, the Panthers were saved from any really dangerous spots and at the same time were enabled to progress gradually toward a point of condition and playing form that will make it possible for them to be at their best when they face the Tartans.

IT IS clear that the athletic authorities at W. & J. picked the right man for coach this year when they selected Andy Kerr.

The popular former Pittsburgher, who has been a success everywhere and every time that he coached or helped to coach a gridiron outfit, showed the spectators a real football team at Forbes Field Saturday, bearing out the promise of strength displayed by the Presidents in their earlier games against Waynesburg, Western Maryland and Bethany.

Of course, the tough part of the Wash-Jeff schedule remains to be played, the program including games with Lafayette, Pitt, Bucknell and West Virginia as well as the "letdown" meeting with Thiel, but there is every indication that Coach Kerr has a team that will give a mighty good account of itself through the remainder of the season.

Benny Bass, the new featherweight champion, and Mike Ballerino, former junior-lightweight champion, box the windup of a show at Philadelphia tonight.

The Sig Keppen-Joey LaGrey bout at McKeesport Thursday night should be hard fought. Both are aggressive and rugged.

The Motor Square Club already is receiving requests for ringside reservations for the Tommy Crowley-Phil Goldstein return bout next Monday night. The fans can't forget what a hummer the meeting between this pair last Christmas turned out to be and look for a repeat on the action.

Tommy Loughran, the new lightweight champion, has written a letter to the sports writers of the nation thanking them for their assistance during his career and promising to be a fighting champion, giving all real contenders a chance. He adds he hopes to become a full-fledged heavyweight champion in time and oppose Gene Tunney in a bout for the title in that class.

The P. A. A. will hold the first of its amateur boxing shows Saturday night when all-star local talent will appear in a card of bouts. The shows will be held monthly.

Kid Lampkin, local Negro lightweight boxer, is on the lookout for a good manager. He may be reached at 116 Deneson avenue.

Three boxing bouts and a wrestling match will feature a smoker for the employes of Spang, Chalfant and Company in the club's auditorium, Etna, tonight. Buck McTiernan will meet Max Ziff, Billy Titus will oppose Charley Cook and Cletus Brucker will engage Johnny Evans in the boxing bouts.

Phil Goldstein meets Joey Dorando at New Haven tonight. This makes his third successive Monday night battle since he returned East and his meeting with Tommy Crowley at Motor Square Garden next Monday night will run the record to four straight.

Pete Zivic boxes Tony Carney in a 10-round bout at Worcester, Mass., next Friday night.—HARRY KECK.

CROWD BELOW EXPECTATIONS

THE Tech-W. & J. crowd was not up to expectations, numbering only about 20,000. Meaning what? That interest in collegiate football here is on the decline, or that the fans haven't yet been worked up to the proper pitch, due to the world series play which kept them from getting off to an even start with the season? Only a few years ago, it was impossible to buy tickets for the better Pitt games at Forbes Field and the Panthers found it necessary to build a stadium, which has proved too large to fill. Tech followed Pitt with the use of Forbes Field and its game with W. & J. last Saturday, with Pitt playing away, should have drawn more than 20,000 persons, but fell some 10,000 short of this mark.

Speaking of the stadium situation, a Pitt man in close touch with the university's athletic affairs, made a significant remark the other day.

"Why should there be any alarm over our failure to fill the stadium with our best games?" he said. "The stadium will accommodate some 72,000 fans and naturally was built with an eye to the future. It would be ridiculous to erect a plant that would be only large enough for the present and would not provide for expansion of interest in the game in the years to come."

EXPLAINING TERRIS' DECLINE

STUDENTS of boxing form have been puzzled over the recent decline of Sid Terris, New York's lightweight dancing master, who for a while loomed as the leading man in his class, but has been floored a number of times by ordinary opponents in his last few bouts. Terris has got up off the floor and acquitted himself well in each instance, but formerly his opponents couldn't even catch up with him long enough to hit him.

Benny Leonard, retired lightweight champion, appears to have solved the problem of what is wrong with Sid. He says he has watched Terris for some time and has come to the conclusion that much of the resiliency has gone out of Sid's one-time dancing legs, slowing him down just enough to keep him from getting out of harm's way and at the same time forcing him to mix more rather than box with his opponents.

Sid always has been of frail physique and cannot stand the gaff and is floored by a punch that hardly would bother a more rugged ringster. Since Sid's legs were his chief stock in trade from the time he entered the ring, it is likely his championship aspirations have run their course, if Leonard's diagnosis of his trouble is correct.

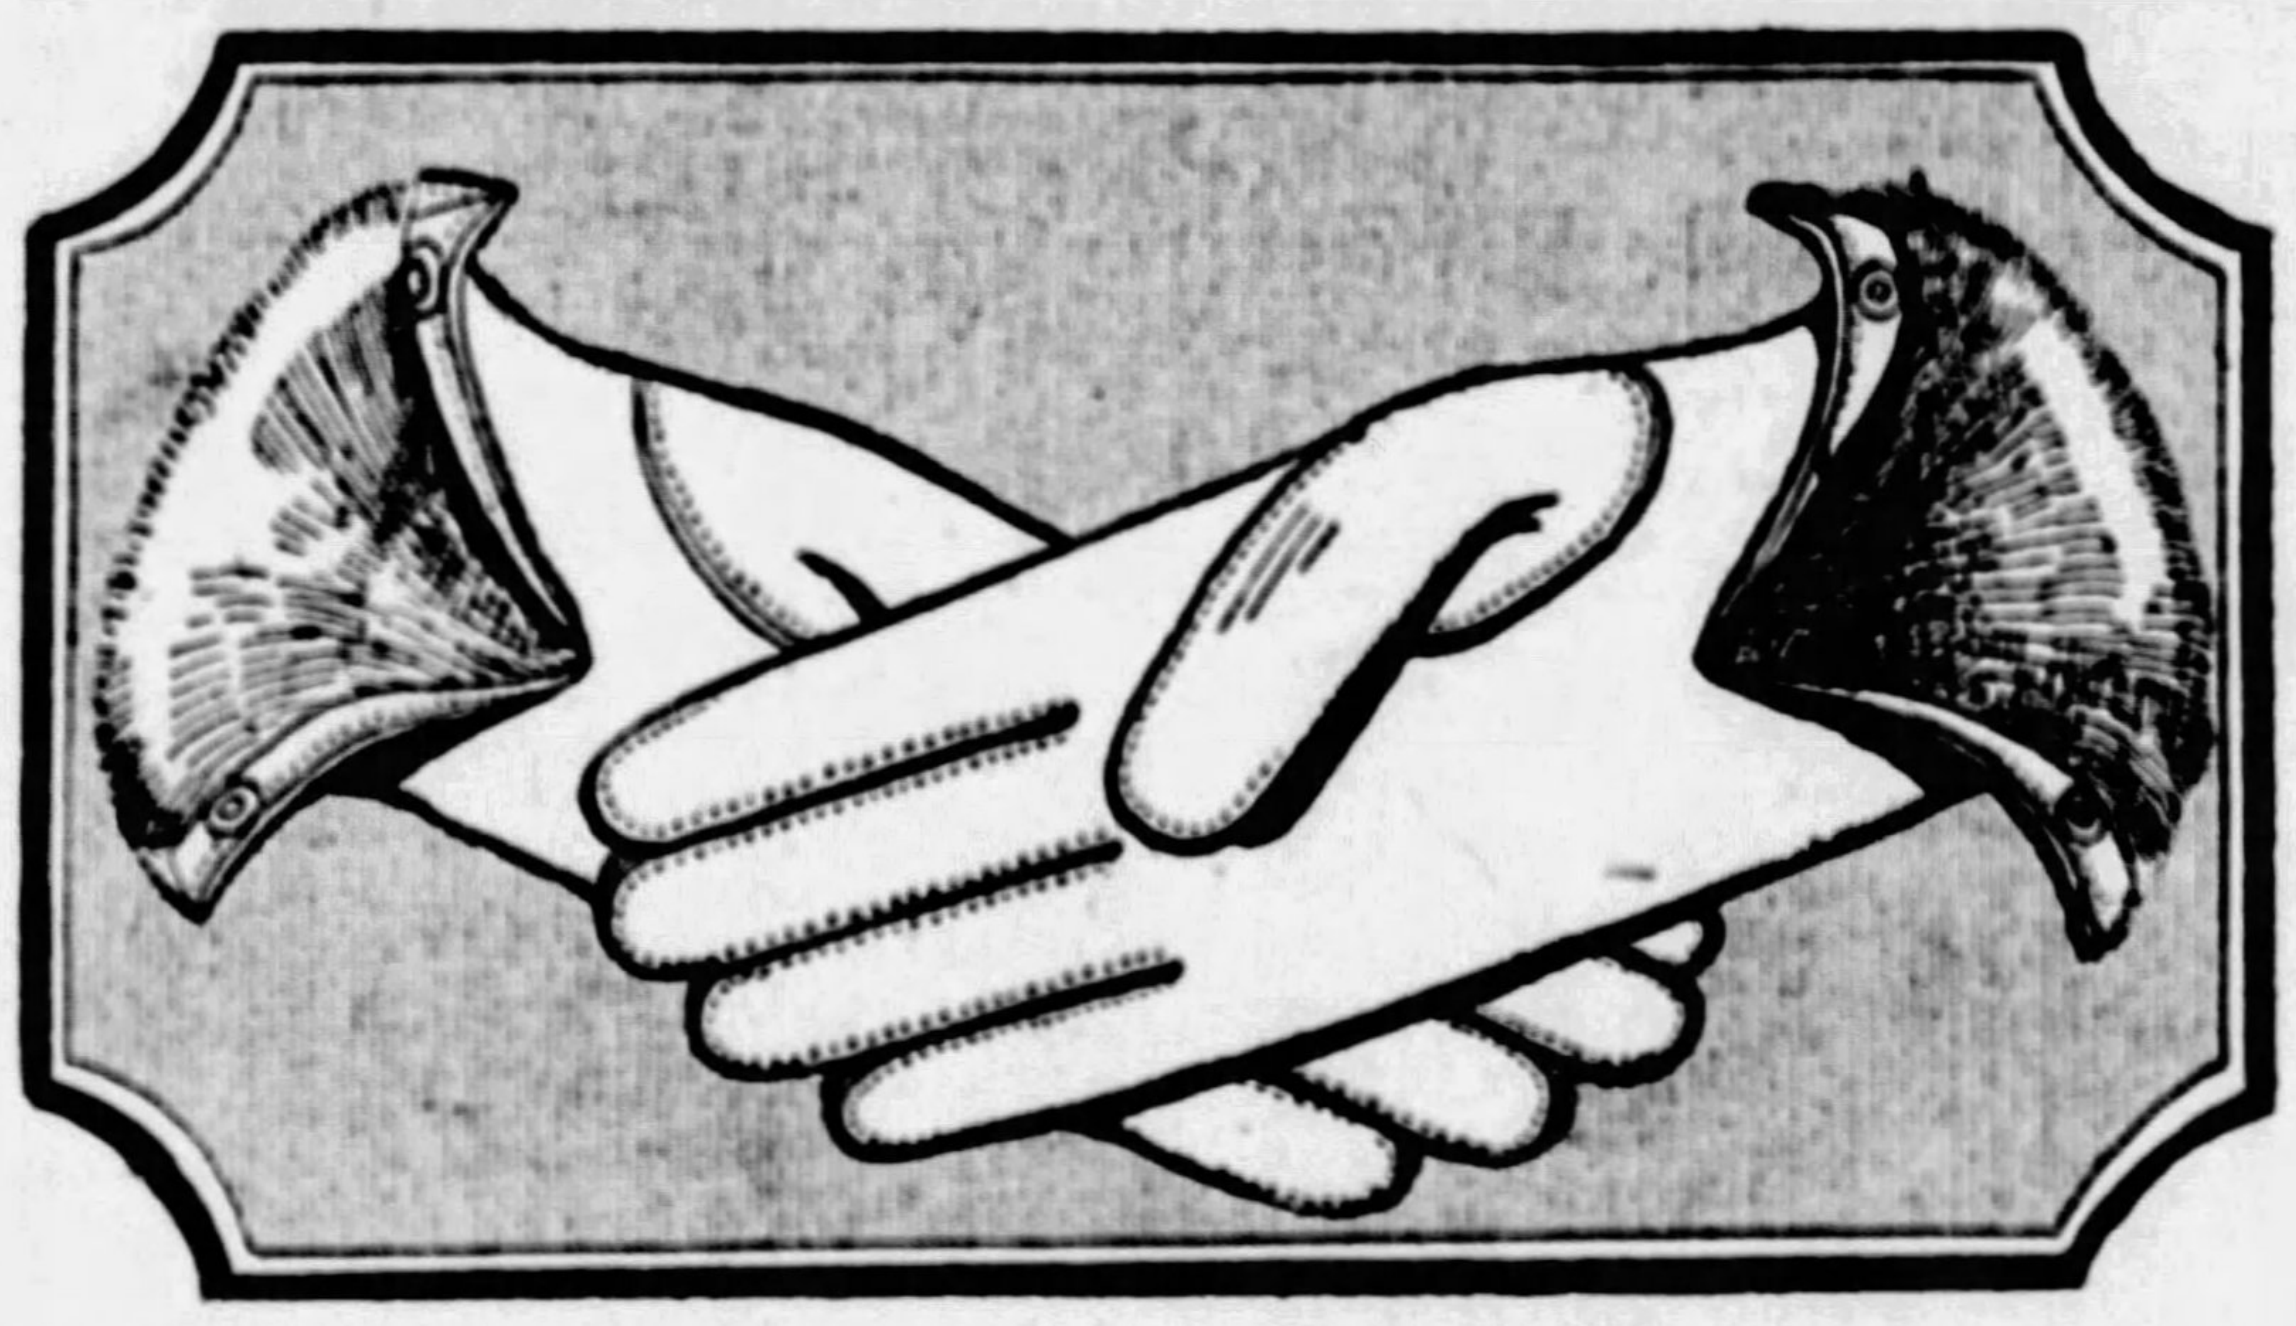
Annual Advance Sale!



Men's Fur-Lined Capeskin Gloves

Thousands of Pairs—Brown Glace and Gray Suede-Finished Capeskin, Warmly Fur-Lined Throughout

$2.95

Last October this sale was a tremendous success. Many came too late and were disappointed. So we doubled our order for this fall. The same fine gloves. The same remarkably low price. A price made possible only because K. & B. and associated stores have a six-store contract with the maker for his entire year's output. The gloves have been coming in for months past—20 or 30 dozen at a time since early last spring. Only on such terms were we able to consummate such an extraordinary group purchase.

The ideal glove for motorists (many women who drive their own cars will buy them). Splendid for street and sports wear. The perfect gift.

Made of African capeskin and warmly lined throughout with soft fur—even to the very finger-tips. What satisfaction to the man who must spend part of each day in winter out-of-doors! What a treat to find them so remarkably low priced! Sizes 7 to 10.

Stocks Act Suspiciously; No Notable Trade Spurt.

By B. C. FORBES

AGRICULTURE is doing better. Industry isn't. The stock market is doing neither one thing nor the other; it flounders around from hour to hour, from day to day, without decisive trend.

THE full measure of business betterment which the fall was expected to bring has not materialized. Retail trade is unusually spotty; from certain points some cheerful reports, from others reports not so cheerful. That the total volume of business moving is below a year ago is clearly reflected by our railway freight figures—as well as by other yardsticks.

It should be emphasized, however, that at this season last year new "records" were being established in many directions. Therefore, the failure to reach last fall's performances does not mean that industry and general business are now poor. As a matter of fact, conditions can still be described as reasonably satisfactory in most directions.

CERTAIN very important industries admittedly are not doing very well. Steel plants are running at only two-thirds of capacity, a drop of some 20 per cent from a year ago, although James A. Farrell told me on Saturday that improvement has set in. The automobile industry has run into a distinct lull, due at least in part to holding back for the appearance of the Ford car by many prospective purchasers. Happily, the latest news is that the new Ford product will soon be ready, and the resumption of full-blast operations at the gigantic Ford plants should not only stimulate the automobile industry, but have a helpful effect in various other directions. Unfilled electrical orders are five per cent under a year ago, and for the first time, consumption of electrical power is running ahead of last year.

Then, the oil industry remains so gravely demoralized that profits and dividends are suffering acutely, a condition which threatens to continue for some time, although it is comforting to recall that no basic industry ever continues permanently in the doldrums. Some soft coal mines have resumed operations and it is hardly conceivable that the strike can last very much longer in any important field. At certain points building is still going on vigorously, but at other points curtailment is the rule.

THE American Federation of Labor states that there is more unemployment than generally supposed. The latest governmental figures revealed a decrease of 3½ per cent in employment as compared with last year.

Against this, however, comes a comprehensive report from Washington presenting a very encouraging picture of business and employment prospects for the balance of the year.

OF very great importance is the improvement agriculturally. Grain prices, on a whole, compare favorably with a year ago and the total will be distinctly larger. Cattle prices have reached new price levels, some varieties selling at the best figures in years.

There is authoritative testimony that farm lands are beginning to recover somewhat in value. Also, farm debts have been very materially reduced at the banks. Cotton quotations have moved irregulary but they finished the week around the 21 cent level. It is encouraging to note that last month's purchases by domestic spinners reached record proportions, although exports fell off.

Altogether, genuine comfort can be derived from the change in our agricultural status.

OUR foreign trade balance, which sank to $4,000,000 in August, reached $85,000,000 last month. And the enormous volume of new loans to foreigners should have at least some helpful influence upon foreign ability to make heavier purchases here.

AFTER jumping up and down, quotations on the New York Stock Exchange ended the week exactly where they began. There are growing symptoms that numbers of large investors are lightening their loads. This liquidation is evident in the railway division as well as elsewhere.

Under all the circumstances, outsiders might do well to operate extremely carefully in stocks which have been tremendously boomed. Transfer of funds from stocks to bonds may easily send the latter to still higher prices.

TRADE REPORTS TURN STOCKS REACTIONARY

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—Pronounced reactionary tendencies developed in today's stock market, presumably in reflection of the unsatisfactory character of many current trade reports. Railroad shares offered fairly good resistance to selling pressure, despite the fact that September earnings statements soon to make their appearance are expected to compare unfavorably with the same month last year, but many of the popular industrials were hammered down 1 to 5 points.

Renewal of call money at 4½ per cent, after the unusually large increase in excess reserve last week, was somewhat of a surprise, but the subsequent lowering of the rate to 4 per cent failed to check the liquidation. Outside of a firming up of export copper prices there were few trade developments of interest during the day.

American Sugar Refining, which broke 5 points in a late wave of selling on Saturday, was carried down another 4½ points today on predictions of unfavorable third quarter earnings. Other sugars also were heavy, the reported increase in the European crop being a bearish factor on the Cuban producing shares.

Sharp breaks took place in some of the high-priced specialties, International Harvester, Abitibi Power and Commercial Solvents all selling down 3 to 4 points. Frank G. Shattuck crossed par to a new high and pools succeeded in elevating a few more specialties to new high ground.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Fisher's Index Higher.

Prof. Irving Fisher's index number of commodity prices last week 146.2 against 145.5 a week ago and 144.6 a month ago, and establishing new high for year.

—I—

Harbison Net Shade Lower.

Harbison-Walker Refractories Company net earnings for September quarter are estimated at $692,000 after all charges for depreciation, depletion and Federal taxes, against $979,000 in the same period in 1926, and $1,012,000 in the June, 1927, quarter. For nine months total net earnings aggregated $2,844,000, compared with $2,589,000 for the same period in 1926.

—I—

Fourth Quarter Car Needs.

Car service division of American Railway Association estimates requirements for moving 27 of principal commodities in last quarter this year at 9,232,000 cars against 9,464,000 a year ago. Slackening in requirements for moving cotton, iron and steel products and motor vehicles is the principal cause of the decline.

—I—

Hupp Motor Earnings.

Hupp Motor Car Company for current year is expected to fall about $1,000,000 short of equalling earnings for 1926. Estimates place 1927 consolidated net income at between $2,400,000 to $2,500,000 after all charges, and taxes, equal to around $2.40 to $2.50 a share on 1,001,159 shares of stock outstanding. For first six months of this year net income was $1,147,822 after above charges equal to $1.14 a share on 1,001,159 shares compared with $2,010,042 or $2.21 a share on 913,419 shares first half of 1926. Smaller net was due to closer margin between manufacturing costs and selling price than year ago. This condition was carried over into final half of current year.

—I—

Atchison Loadings.

Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway handled 46,124 revenue freight cars in week ended October 14, against 46,130 in same period of 1926.

—I—

Marshall Field Head Optimistic.

Sailing on the Majestic for a five weeks' business trip abroad, James Simpson, president of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, predicted prosperity will continue. He said the crop situation in the West is greatly improved due to good September weather, and with the easy money rates now prevailing there was little cause for pessimism as both these factors tend to create a broad purchasing power. "The outlook for continued prosperity was never better, and although politics in 1928 may have some bearing," he said, "I do not believe its effect will be of much concern. The cotton situation in the South is favorable and is benefiting us. Our business is favorable and should show improvement over last year."

—I—

Simms' Output 21,500 a Day.

Simms Petroleum Company, through development of low-cost crude oil in the West Texas area, has more than doubled its daily average production since the first of this year and now is producing 21,500 barrels daily net, its largest yield.

—I—

Oil for Fuel Use Declines.

Bureau of Mines survey shows a decrease in the use of oil for fuel in 1926 of approximately 4,000,000 barrels as compared with 1925. Canvass developed also that there was a small decrease in the use of coal, an increase in the use of gas, both natural gas and refinery gas, and an increase in the use of petroleum coke.

—I—

Lead Production Lower.

Production of lead in United States and Mexico in September, according to American Bureau of Metal Statistics, totaled 77,380 short tons of crude, 79,517 tons of refined and 498 tons of antimonial. In August output was 79,092 tons of crude, 77,226 tons of refined and 1,272 tons of antimonial. Stocks of lead in the United States and Mexico by members of the institute amounted to 37,221 tons September 30, compared with 43,159 tons August 31, a decrease of 5,938 tons.

—I—

American Chicle Gains.

American Chicle Company reports for September quarter, net income of $455,897 after interest, depreciation and income taxes, equal after all preferred dividends to $2.09 a share on the 186,535 no par common shares outstanding, as compared with $422,033, or $1.92 a share on the common in the June quarter and $344,349 or $1.49 per share in the September, 1926, quarter. Net income for nine months to September 30, amounted to $1,299,365, or $5.44 a share on the common, as against $965,075, or $4.13 a share in the same period in 1926.

—I—

The Van Sweringen Merger.

There is belief that minority opposition to the new Van Sweringen merger plan will be withdrawn when hearings thereon are resumed in November, according to brokerage house advices.

—I—

Money Flurry About Over.

Most observers think the flurry in the call money rate is temporary and predictions were heard in some banking quarters that the rate could go below 4 per cent before the end of the current week. Such a development would be optimistic and might be used by those working for higher prices to make a market demonstration. Interest totaling approximately $140,000,000 on the Fourth Liberty Loan is being received by holders. This money soon should find its way back into banks and be an influence toward easier rates.

—I—

Continental Baking A.

Better feeling exists toward baking stocks generally, with Continental Baking "A" being taken because of its $1 a share dividend, which gives an excellent return at prevailing prices. Interests in the company report conditions materially improving and express confidence the company has turned the corner.

—I—

Vanadium Dividends.

Vanadium directors meet the middle of this week. Wall Street is still talking of an increase in the regular cash rate from $2 a share now paid. However, in semi-official quarters it is maintained that, if anything is done at this time, it probably will be an extra of $1 a share.

—I—

Northwestern Loadings.

The Chicago and Northwestern Railroad handled 184,822 carloads during the first 14 days of October as compared with 185,294 a year ago.

WARNS OF BLINDNESS FROM CHILD DISEASES

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Childhood diseases often lead later to blindness, members of the National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness were warned by Dr. Edward Jackson, of Denver. Such diseases as measles, mumps, spinal meningitis and scarlet fever require specially careful attention, he declared. Americans must also be educated to the importance of avoiding eye strains and transgressions of health laws to avoid blindness, he said.

To Vote on Split-up.

Stockholders of International Shoe Company will vote October 28 on a proposed split-up of common stock on the basis of four for one, with an increase in authorized common stock from 1,400,000 to 4,000,000 shares.

Oil Production Drops.

Crude oil production in California last week averaged 632,300 barrels daily, a decrease of 1,300 daily compared with the week before.

Nitrate of Soda Soars.

Heavy buying of Chile nitrate of soda in recent weeks has carried the market for spot nitrate to $2.45 per 100 pounds, an advance of 30 cents per 100 pounds over the opening price on carlot quantities quoted by importers at the start of the season, and 5 cents over the spot quotation a year ago, says the Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter. Importers are inclined to credit the free selling in Chile, and a more favorable position of this country's cotton industry, for the upturn in nitrate of soda prices.

To Form Tin Cartel.

Advices from London say an agreement has been reached by tin producers to organize an international cartel to regulate tin prices in which the United States would have an interest of 25 per cent.

To Build Wheat Spur

Subject to approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Montana Commission, the Great Northern will build an 80-mile extension next summer to open an important spring wheat section in the Turner region, Montana, costing $2,000,000.

Allis Chalmers Net

Present indications point to earnings by Allis Chalmers Manufacturing Company for 1927, of about $11 a share on the common. Net for nine months was $2,380,220, or $8.65 a share. Sales are running ahead of 1926. Earnings are now running about 60 per cent in excess of dividend requirements on the common, which pays $5 a share.

Aircraft Products Exports High

Exports of Aircraft Products in July were valued at $191,094 consisting of one plane valued at $11,324, 19 Aircraft engines valued at $149,797, and Aircraft parts, $30,973, the Automotive Division of the Department of Commerce reports. Germany was the principal buyer.

Oldsmobile Break Records.

Domestic and foreign retail sales of Oldsmobile cars have broken records for the third consecutive month, September showing a gain of 14 per cent over September, 1926. Substantial increases were reported for August and July over corresponding months last year. Export trade in nine months this year has increased 20 per cent.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The cotton market opened easy today at a decline of 11 to 31 points under liquidation or reselling by buyers of Saturday, who appeared to be influenced by relatively easy Liverpool cables, and a favorable view of over-Sunday weather condition in the south.

December contracts sold off to 20.62c and March to 20.81c or about 29 to 31 points below Saturday's closing quotations, but the selling tapered off at these figures, while trade buying and covering caused rallies of 8 or 10 points from the lowest by the end of the first hour.

Reports of a low barometer off the coast of Florida attracted attention and may have contributed to the rally, although the opinion was expressed in some quarters that a big high area over the western part of the country would push it out to sea.

The market later became steadier on covering and buying which appeared to be promoted by uncertainty regarding the tropical storm in the vicinity of Swan Island, moving northeast, and reports of a generally steady or firm spot basis in the South. December sold up to 20.84c and March to 21.04c late in the forenoon or within 7 to 14 points of Saturday's close.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The raw sugar market was unchanged early today at 4.71c for Cuban duty paid, with no sales reported.

Expectations of some bullish announcement from Cuba relative to the restricting or delaying of the next Cuban crop, a firmer London market and reports of a tropical storm in the vicinity of Cuba were responsible for a firmer feeling in raw sugar futures. Prices at midday were at about the best of the session and from 4 to 6 points above the previous close on covering and active buying by houses with trade and Cuban connections.

In refined sugar, prices were unchanged at 5.90 to 6.10c for fine granulated, with only a small inquiry reported.

Week Opens Quietly In Local Market

The week opened quietly on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange with prices showing practically no change from the levels prevailing on the close last week. Early dealings were confined generally to small lots of the issues in which most of the trading centered last week. National Fireproofing was handled early at 20, a fraction under the figure at which it closed Saturday, but only a small volume of the stock was handled.

Standard Sanitary was quiet in the first half, continuing to drag around the 104 level at which it held the latter half of the week following its recession from 106, the peak of the last upswing. The stock is consolidating its new position above 100 very nicely and bulls on the issue are confidently expecting a further advance when a more clear indication of the general business trend is obtained.

Fuel stocks were very dull. Trading in this section was centered almost exclusively in Lone Star Gas in which several trades at 49½ were recorded. This figure represented no change from the previous final. Arkansas Gas was also unchanged, but only a few shares changed hands.

Miscellaneous stocks were also neglected. Small lots of Penn-Federal Corporation were handled at the same prices at which the stock sold Saturday and there was little effort to move the stock.

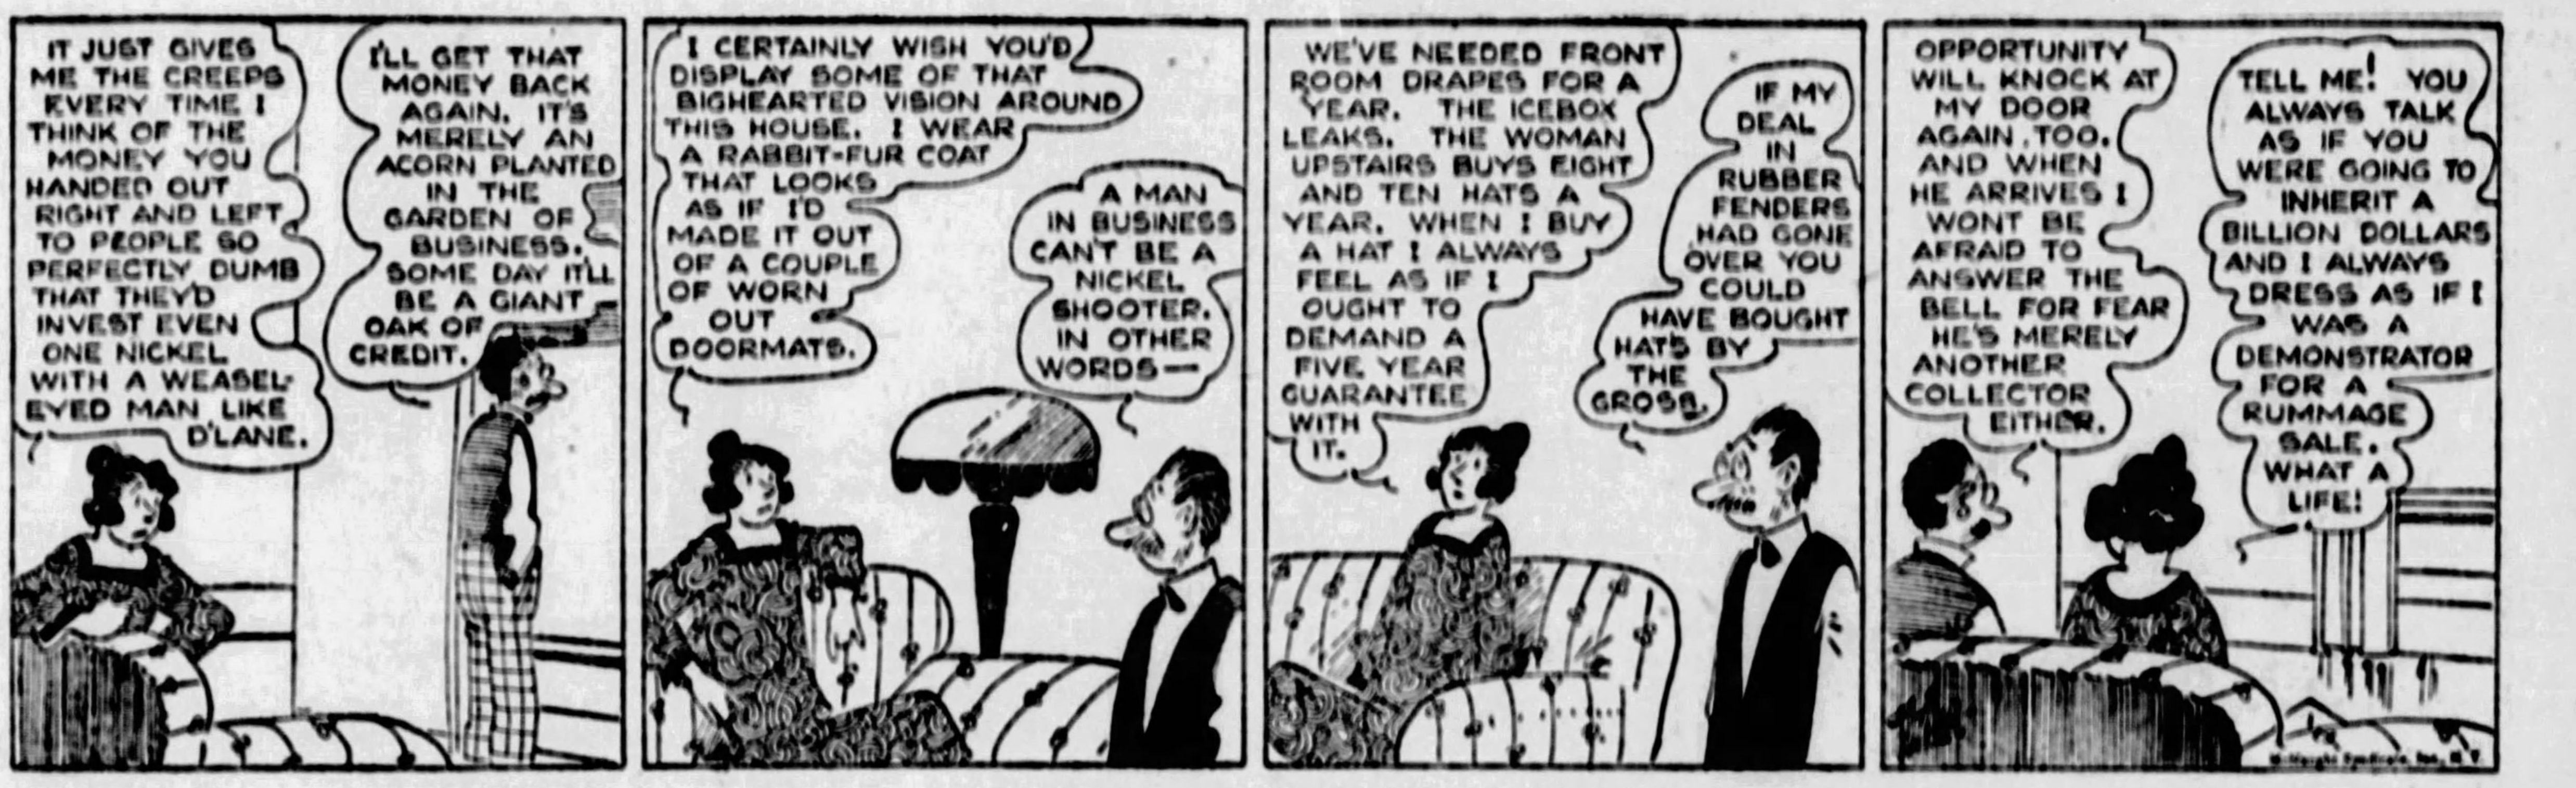
THE BUNGLE FAMILY . . . . Business Versus the Home



IT JUST GIVES ME THE CREEPS EVERY TIME I THINK OF THE MONEY YOU HANDED OUT RIGHT AND LEFT TO PEOPLE SO PERFECTLY DUMB THAT THEY'D INVEST EVEN ONE NICKEL WITH A WEASEL-EYED MAN LIKE D'LANE.
I'LL GET THAT MONEY BACK AGAIN. IT'S MERELY AN ACORN PLANTED IN THE GARDEN OF BUSINESS. SOME DAY IT'LL BE A GIANT OAK OF CREDIT.
I CERTAINLY WISH YOU'D DISPLAY SOME OF THAT BIGHEARTED VISION AROUND THIS HOUSE. I WEAR A RABBIT-FUR COAT THAT LOOKS AS IF I'D MADE IT OUT OF A COUPLE OF WORN OUT DOORMATS.
A MAN IN BUSINESS CAN'T BE A NICKEL SHOOTER. IN OTHER WORDS—
WE'VE NEEDED FRONT ROOM DRAPES FOR A YEAR. THE ICEBOX LEAKS. THE WOMAN UPSTAIRS BUYS EIGHT AND TEN HATS A YEAR. WHEN I BUY A HAT I ALWAYS FEEL AS IF I OUGHT TO DEMAND A FIVE YEAR GUARANTEE WITH IT.
IF MY DEAL IN RUBBER FENDERS HAD GONE OVER YOU COULD HAVE BOUGHT HATS BY THE GROSS.
OPPORTUNITY WILL KNOCK AT MY DOOR AGAIN, TOO, AND WHEN HE ARRIVES I WON'T BE AFRAID TO ANSWER THE BELL FOR FEAR HE'S MERELY ANOTHER COLLECTOR EITHER.
TELL ME! YOU ALWAYS TALK AS IF YOU WERE GOING TO INHERIT A BILLION DOLLARS AND I ALWAYS DRESS AS IF I WAS A DEMONSTRATOR FOR A RUMMAGE SALE. WHAT A LIFE!

THIS WAGGISH WORLD

by Roy K. Moulton

AXEL G. REESE, multi-millionaire manufacturer of lubricating oils, has kindly consented to write our weekly inspirational talk to young business men this week. These talks are also broadcast every Fridday at 7 a. m. over station WOOF. They are creating a tremendous impression in business circles. Mr. Reese once invented a patent patato-bug sprayer, which proved to be the foundation of his great fortune, and since then has been interviewed as an expert on every subject from the Greek drama to psycho-analysis. He speaks intelligently on one subject—lubricating oils. Mr. Reese's inspirational talk today is as follows, with necessary corrections of grammar, spelling, punctuation and data, by the editor:

I HAD just attended a noonday luncheon and it depressed me because it brought home to me a great truth. It exposed my greatest fault. I am not able to speak in public. The orator at the luncheon pointed out what a failure I am.

Here I am, a man worth possibly sixty millions, and I cannot get up and address a board of directors. I am one of those human clams. They all say: "Here comes that bright fellow, Mushnoodle, he can tell us what we want to know," or "Ah, here is Dinglewallop, he can tell us. That man has the oratorical gift." But they never say "Here comes Reese. He can explain everything." No, it is very embarrassing and when I left the lunch club I was greatly depressed.

When I got to my Fifth avenue cottage the door was opened by Mildew, my English butler. He remarked that I was looking distrait.

I did not know what he meant but it sounded like I felt only not quite so bad.

"Mildew, old boy," I said, slapping him on the back, "here I am worth sixty million dollars and I am a rank failure. I cannot speak in public. I cannot charm a board of directors. Think what a success I might be if I could only talk."

"I shouldn't worry about that, sir," said Mildew, excellent fellow. "I once had a cousin the same way and he lived to ninety-six years of age and he had thousands of friends."

"I AM terribly upset by this realization," I said. "I believe I am going to have a fit."

"Very good, sir," replied Mildew promptly, handing me a whiskbroom. "You can sweep you a clean spot on the floor over there in the corner by the grand piano." It is wonderful how efficient these English servants are.

After the fit I felt some better, but still realized that my career had been useless. There was nothing ahead of me except those few minor pleasures one can buy with sixty million dollars.

"Mildew," said I, "I believe I will commit suicide."

"Very good, sir," he replied. "I think I know where there is a goodish bit of clothesline," and he hastened away to fetch it.

The English servants are remarkable, as I have said before. They are so attached to their employers—the old family feeling, a holdover from the baronial era.

But at that moment my plans were interfered with, for I spied upon the hall table an advertisement from Dr. Conkey's School of Business Expression. It promised to teach the highest form of eloquence by mail and guaranteed to teach any man, no matter how dumb, to address a board of directors.

It was providential. It saved my life. I took the course. And young men, let that be a lesson to you. Learn how to talk in public before you reach my age or you may be lost.

Learn to talk, even though you don't say anything.

Coal Strike Must End; Women, Children Affected

Stop the coal strike! This struggle, which has crippled industry in the Pittsburgh district for months and months, should not be permitted to continue another day. It should be ended not only for good, hard, practical business reasons, but for an immensely more persuasive reason—one appealing to humanity. Suffering, which already has been too great, will be multiplied and intensified with the coming winter.

Hundreds of families of strikers have been evicted. More will be. They have been evicted legally. The law has said they have no right to remain. Properties they have occupied are desired by the owners, who have a legal and moral right to do as they wish with them. But if there is no question of moral obligation involved in that angle, there is a great moral obligation existing in the situation as a whole.

That obligation is on all of us. It is to halt the strike. Not alone because it affects all of us detrimentally, but because love of our fellow man says we must end this contest. It has gone beyond the point where we longer can permit consideration of whatever principles may be involved in the struggle to stand in the way of bringing it to an end.

It has reached the point where women and children are the greatest sufferers. As the winter goes along their condition will become worse and worse with each passing week. All the burden cannot be borne by any organization of whatever nature, union or social.

Friends cannot supply what women and children most need—HOMES. They can be given food and clothing and shelter but they cannot be given homes. That is something that comes only with some kind of orderly life. As a matter of cold fact, they will not be given even food, shelter and clothing in any adequate conception of what these words mean if the coal strike continues into the winter.

The strike must be stopped. Eventually it will end, of course, as all things come to an end. But we must not wait until one side or another gives in from sheer weakness. The struggle has now settled into the "dogged determination" stage and that stage is fatal to morals on BOTH sides.

There is no question about the obligation to stop this strike right now, before another week—another day—has passed, but it is not so easy to say how it shall be stopped. But when a thing MUST be ended there always is a way to end it. Many conferences have been held, but it is evident that there was not the proper conciliatory spirit. Perhaps if both sides got together, each ready to give something here and there, they could come to an agreement.

If the women of each side were to meet around a conference table, it is certain the matter would be adjusted speedily. If the wives of the coal mine operators and the wives of the coal diggers were to compare notes the strike would not last another day. Why cannot the men involved meet and consider the impending winter, and its certain horrors, if the strike continue, from the viewpoint of those women and children who must endure what fate holds for them in cheerless barracks?

If the men involved do not act speedily, Gov. Fisher may feel called upon to take a hand. Gov. Pinchot did that in a similar impasse in the anthracite region and the difficulty was adjusted promptly.

The strike must end. Somebody will end it. It may as well be the men of both sides—meeting as friends instead of enemies. They can do it if they have the will—and right spirit.

"Cheater" Prosecution Approved by Lawyers

Vote stealers are doomed. Those guilty of outrageous dishonesty in the recent primary are destined to receive punishment. District Attorney Gardner's plans for the prosecution of these cases are approved by the committee of lawyers appointed by the Bar Association. This means that practically the entire bar of Allegheny county is the prosecutor of the 134 election officers against whom informations charging cheating have been made.

Approval of the plans of Mr. Gardner by the committee speaks highly for the manner in which the county prosecutor has prepared to bring the cases to trial. It lets the public know that the matter rests with a man in whom it can have confidence.

And, finally, it lets scheming politicians know that cheating MUST be no part of their plans in the future.

A $5,000,000 Temple

The Free Masons Are Building It in Memory of George Washington.

GEORGE WASHINGTON MASONIC NATIONAL MEMORIAL, AT ALEXANDRIA, VA.

Mr. S. W. McGill, National Director of the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Association, believes, rightly, that many readers will be interested in this picture and the work that is being done by 4,000,000 Masons in the United States.

President Coolidge laid the cornerstone of this great memorial on November 1, 1923. The cost of the Temple when completed will be more than $5,000,000. George Washington, in whose honor the Temple was named, was a Mason, so are the Prince of Wales, the King, his father, and masculine British royalty generally.

This picture, in which all Masons and many others will be interested, gives an imperfect idea of the great memorial built to honor Washington's memory. But it does give an idea.

Garrett P Serviss Says:

Reshaping the Seasons

"Is there any natural phenomenon that justifies the present placing of our months? I have often wondered why January did not begin where December 21 now is. I also think that April 1 should mark the spring equinox, and October 1 should mark the fall equinox.—A. H."

ONLY very strong reasons can justify a change in the accepted calendar. Too many interests and conveniences are intimately associated with the order in which the months and seasons are arranged to permit a merely sentimental alteration.

It is true that our arrangement of the seasons is out of accord with the most natural division of the year, which is marked by the two equinoxes and the two solstices, occurring respectively March 20 and September 22, and June 21 and December 22 (approximately). At the equinoxes the relative length of day and night interchanges between the Northern and Southern hemispheres; at the solstices the sun reverses its motion in declination, the days shortening in one hemisphere and simultaneously lengthening in the other.

It is a pity that Julius Caesar was induced by an Alexandrian Greek astronomer to change the date of the beginning of the Roman year from March to January. In the Northern hemisphere, which is the one that has by far the greatest area of land and has always had, and no doubt always will have, the greatest population, the spring equinox would seem to be the most natural point of beginning for the year, because it marks substantially the moment of the reawakening of animated nature. Then the middle of the year would fall at the autumn equinox, when nature's decline begins in the same hemisphere. The whitening locks of the aging year would appear as the snows of late December, and the end would come with poetic and religious harmony, in the brightening hope and promise of the new year.

This, it seems to me, would be an ideal arrangement. But, unfortunately, the ideal is not always recognized even when possessed, as is proved by the fact that substantially this same arrangement prevailed in Rome before Caesar's time, and also in England until so late as 1752. But Caesar's reform was induced by a very serious situation, the Roman calendar having fallen into hopeless confusion with respect to the natural divisions of the year, so that his changes were altogether admirable, except that he overdid the business in setting back the beginning of the year from March to January.

However, the new year's holiday is, for celebration purposes, excellently placed in the existing calendar, which is not likely to be changed in that respect—and perhaps not in any respect. By Pope Gregory's amendment of the Julian calendar our almanacs are now kept in such close accord with nature's own march that the remaining discrepancy will not be worth bothering with for many centuries to come. And as civilization and its exigencies increase, human accord with nature is less and less regarded, as witness the "daylight saving" laws by which we arbitrarily displace the sun at noon!

Return Favors

THERE are some things you cannot do for yourself.

You are more or less under obligation to certain of your associates and friends for favors regularly bestowed.

At one time they offered to help you and you were enthusiastically appreciative.

Now they cannot stop because you seem to depend on them for their aid.

Have you ever investigated the conditions under which your friends regularly supply you with these things you like and could not otherwise have?

Have you ever tried to think of some way to share with these persons something you have that they have not?

Is it all "take" and no "give" in your vocabulary?

You may be a nice person to do things for, because you are gushingly demonstrative when you get what you like.

But a little more effort to pay up obligations would show your gratefulness better than words.

Tales That Are Told

The One to Warn

A BIG, powerful-looking woman entered the fortune teller's tent, leading a little boy by the hand. In due course she was given a peep into the future.

"I warn you," said the brown-faced gipsy, solemnly, "that a dark man is about to cross your path. He means to do you harm—"

"Mummy," whispered the little boy, anxiously, "why don't you tell the lady to warn the dark man?"—London Tit-Bits.

Sisters

THEY sat on the moonlit pier, two elderly sisters, both spinsters, and a wealthy bachelor stood in between them.

The older sister looked up at the bachelor's face and in a far-away voice remarked:

"I have always had a presentiment that I would die young."

After uttering this thought she stood up and leaned close against the man. The moon sailed behind a cloud.

"But you didn't hear, did you?" came the other sister's voice dryly in the silence.

Not Included

LITTLE Timothy had been passing judgment on a neighbor in no uncertain terms, a judgment that was far from flattering.

"I hate the old cat!" he cried passionately, stamping his foot. "She's a horrid thing, that's what Mrs. Ginney is!"

His mother looked at him reprovingly.

"You shouldn't say that, Tim dear," she admonished. "The Bible says that we must love everybody."

"I know," replied the small child. "But Mrs. Ginney wasn't born then!"—London Answers.

So Bright

IT WAS between the dances. They were sitting in a secluded corner.

"You have wonderful eyes," he murmured fondly.

"Yes?" she inquired expectantly.

"They are like stars," he went on.

Her lips brushed his as he murmured:

"They are so very bright."

Then he fumbled in his pocket and drew forth a glittering object.

"They are so bright," he said once again, and thrust his watch before her. "See if you can tell me the time in the dark."—London Answers.

Where He Got Off

THERE is a certain railway "halt" on the northern outskirts of London where the train stops upon occasions for the convenience of golfers.

A member of the adjacent golf course once invited a friend to have a day's play with him, and asked his guest to travel by a certain train.

On the day in question, however, the train did not stop, and the golfer, who was waiting on the platform for his friend, eventually saw a battered human object with a bag of broken clubs limping along the line towards him.

"Hullo!" he said; "where did you get off?"

"Oh," said the visitor with a generous wave of his hand, "all along the line."—London Tit-Bits.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up betimes and to a travel agency where I articled to visit Egypt this winter and then to breakfast on a turkey hash. Afterward to walk among the bazars and saw a tiny vial of perfume priced at $100.

Home and cast my accounts and noble resolves for thrift sadly awry. So to call on Watterson Rothacker, the young film magnate, but he had entrained for the coast. A thin fog billowed up from the harbor made the city as beautiful as I ever saw it what with myriad office building lights.

In the evening came roysterers to make jinks with a silly game called "black jack," and so much hilarity a neighbor on the right asked if he might join us and did, and he was an ex-husband of a lady in the party, albeit good friends. So to bed late.

Cafes and cabarets seek to perk up sagging receipts with what they call "name" attractions. It is a specious theory—famous names will attract customers and such is the curiosity of a curious city they often do.

The New York subway has never had a great disaster. There have been panics and such but not a wreck of consequence. The mechanical system is almost foolproof. A train cannot zip past a station without stopping, so highly perfected is the lock contrivances.

The motorman's hand must be on the operating switch or the train will not budge. This offers safety in case the motorman should fall dead or faint at his post. In this emergency the train stops and the train behind receives a warning signal. Only once has a motorman fallen lifeless at the throttle.

Subway workers are paid for a seven-day week, from $29 for guards to $41 for motormen and in consideration of risks they take it seems small pay. They have gone on strike several times but the wage gain has been slight.

There are in the subway 2,682 curves, stop signals and switch crossings. The motormen must sit in tiny cages gazing only into the damp blackness as the train burrows way underground. It is a job offering monotonous tedium in gloomiest surroundings.

Subway workers after a few months service acquire what is known as "subway fat." Almost invariably they add weight and the standard of health is high, which is a blow to those who predicted dire physical results for workers when subways were opened.

Following the bright idea of sailors on shore leave who row in Central Park lakes it is said many subway workers employ idle hours riding under the island and swapping gossip with fellow subway guards.

If there has ever been a subway guard who pronounced names of stations they were approaching in an understandable manner I have not heard him. Every guard has an unintelligible mumble which sounds something like "Illah, goompty-coff." Or worse.

Many New York husbands and wives have what are known as 50-50 arrangements. Each runs with a different set of friends and no questions are asked. The husband may dine out with a fascinating blonde and meet his wife dining with a marceled boy friend and be good-natured about it. They merely live under the same roof in a state of marital neutrality. Of course, this plan exists only among couples of means. A divorce lawyer explains it as the last desperate effort to prop up a collapsing marriage headed for the divorce court. It is largely true when husbands and wives feel that way toward each other, they have lost all interest. They are through and merely delay the annoyance of telling the judge.

Two illustrious song and dance men—George M. Cohan and George White—have regaled Broadway this season by appearing in their own shows. Song and dance men are just that—to the finish.

Newspapers and War

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Herr Stressemann, a German statesman, said not long ago at the Geneva conference that he hoped that newspaper men would collaborate with politicians to achieve a smoother running of international affairs.

Sir Austen Chamberlain also referred to the press conference resolution which appealed to the world press to contribute to the consolidation of peace by combating hatreds between nationalities and thus prepare for moral disarmament. He declared that "the collaboration of the press in such a work is of equal consequence, and may be even of greater influence than anything statesmen can do."

As a rule I don't think much of a policy of a paper. They ought to print the straight news without reference to a policy and tell us what happens, whether it bears out their conviction of what ought to happen or not.

But there is one policy every newspaper ought to have. It ought to do everything in its power to eliminate the causes of war. It should carefully and even prayerfully ask itself what causes war and put the soft pedal on that.

The ultimate cause of all wars is an inflamed and erroneous public opinion. Without favorable public opinion wars would cease, and the newspaper has as much to do with making public opinion as almost any other influence.

There ought therefore to dominate the editors of every newspaper the idea that they will stress those things that make for peace and harmony and decry whatever makes for trouble. War is an expensive and fallacious idea and every newspaper ought to work against it.

War will never be outlawed by Congress or statesmen, but by becoming unpopular with the masses.

To accomplish business there must be continual compromise. The idea that one nation is always right is erroneous. As Herr Stressmann says, "Compromise is not a sign of feebleness, but of wisdom."

No nation should think more highly of itself than it ought to think, for international egotism is one of the most fruitful causes of war.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Enchantment

ENCHANTMENT used to mean a magic wand, a princess sleeping in a woodland bower, a deathless swan upon a waveless pond, a rosebud never reaching fullest flower. Time was when earth and all its stores were new, enchantment meant a host of lovely things; a magic carpet soaring through the blue, a bird endowed with never-weary wings. But now, with age, such magic has grown pale and all its wonders leave the vision cold, for earth's rare beauties seem an oft-told tale when eyes have seen so many years unfold. Enchantment, now, is but a word, a smile that leads the thoughts to long-past days to rove and wakes in weary hearts, a little while, the wonder of life's springtime joy and love.

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

FIRST in so many things in the scientific world, it is not strange to find that Edison pioneered "field telephony." When James Gordon Bennett, publisher of note, was having the ship Jeanette outfitted for her Arctic voyage Edison gave him a set of telephones for conversation at long distances over the ice-floes.

CHARLES BATCHELOR, Edison's chief assistant in perfecting the incandescent lamp, affords a typical example of the loyalty and devotion of his associates in the most trying days. Time after time Batchelor had tried to get a perfect carbon filament that could be fitted by the glass-blower into a lamp.

TIME after time the delicate loop of carbonized thread would break when being taken out of the mold. Finally Batchelor, with Edison following, reached the glass-blower's bench with one carbon still intact. Just as he was handing it to the glass-blower it broke. Though utterly dismayed, he tried again and succeeded.

WHEN on the trail of an idea Edison works until he succeeds, or proves to his own satisfaction that "it can't be done." In search of a better filament for his lamp he ransacked the world for bamboos and other fibrous plants. In this picture he is dispatching two of his explorers.
